EAST FELICIANA CALLS FOR U. S. MARSHALS TO PROTECT BALLOTS

TODAY

No Hauptmann Show
Men Do Good Work
40 Million Gas Masks
Warning To Girls

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

(Copyright, 1935, by King Features Syndicate Inc., International Copyright and all other rights reserved.)

NEW JERSEY says the execution of Hauptmann, close at hand, will be no theatrical show. No woman reporter will be allowed to witness Hauptmann's death, an excellent idea, although some young ladies will not think so. Female reporters, let us hope, will have babies later on. Watching a miserable creature writhing in the electric chair would not be good for the babies, although science no longer believes in prenatal influences, as Voltaire did.

In his philosophical dictionary, he asserts positively that a woman was frightened by a queer little performing dog, hopping around on its hind legs, just before her baby was born, and that the baby looked exactly like the little dog.

FIFTY-TWO REPRESENTATIVES of news and photography companies discussed the execution with Colonel Kimberling, principal keeper of the prison, as they might have discussed plans for an inauguration ball.

Great news services will be present as a matter of course. The jury of 12 acting as witnesses will all be newspapermen.

NO BROADCASTING will be permitted from prison premises. It may be radio waves leaving our thick lower atmosphere travel on to other planets. Even so those other planets would be little interested in the Hauptmann performance.

The spirit of man, since it must travel through space, at least nine hundred million times six trillion miles before it can escape from this universe will need high speed "going home" far faster than light, 186,000 miles per second. Think of spending 900,000,000 years on the way to heaven —you would forget who you were, when you started.

THE NEWS that we read from day to day is usually "chicken feed" of history, amounting to little, but a news dispatch from Indio, California, is important to the world and an honor to men who think, and to their ability to control their destinies.

Two thousand feet underground four hundred pounds of dynamite knocked out five feet of granite and united two sections of a tunnel, longest in the world for its diameter. In that tunnel, part of the East Coachella tube, is one of thirty-seven tunnels that will take water across the southern California deserts to Los Angeles and 12 other communities, bringing through its circumference of forty-eight feet an inexhaustible water supply, enough for six million people. And Los Angeles alone will have 6,000,000. That is an achievement worth while.

WHEN BALDWIN, prime minister of England, expressed fear of a "mad dog attack" referring to the possibility that Mussolini might send a few hundred airplanes to visit the heart of London, he was not talking at Random. The British have brains enough to take the airplane and what it will de seriously.

THE BRITISH government has ordered forty million gas masks, enough to protect the lungs of every man and woman in Great Britain. These will be issued instantly in case of a real emergency.

That is a short paragraph of ten lines today. It will be bigger and more important news when the next big war comes.

A TWENTY-YEAR-OLD Poughkeepsie girl "from the other side of the track," working for $6 a week, was invited by a young man to get

PERSIAN MINISTER IS RECALLED AFTER HIS ARREST IN U. S.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—(AP)—A little more than a month after a diplomatic incident caused by his arrest for speeding at Elkton, Md., Ghaffar Djalal, the Iranian (Persian) minister to Washington, has been recalled by his government.

This fact was announced today at the envoy's imposing legation on fashionable Massachusetts avenue, but the official reason was withheld there and Djalal denied himself to inquirers.

It was not made clear whether the minister was being rebuked or whether his government was taking this means of manifesting its displeasure over the sequel to his arrest, provided by Secretary Hull in a warning to all foreign representatives that their diplomacy immunity did not entitle them to ignore the laws of the land.

In some diplomatic quarters, the opinion was expressed that the recall of the minister was intended by his government as a protest against the secretary's declaration.

OPPOSING HOUSE FACTIONS REACH ACCORD ON BONUS

Senate Democrats Instruct Robinson To Take Up Matter With President

CHIEFTAINS PREDICT ACT WILL BE PASSED SHORTLY

Patman Measure Providing Inflation Is Virtually Taken From Fight

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—(AP)—Fighting house factions made peace over the bonus today as senate Democrats, also talking of compromise, instructed their leader to take up the issue with President Roosevelt.

The list of bonus measures at the center of the annual congressional battle narrowed to two when the Patman bill to provide payment through $2,000,000,000 of currency expansion, was, in effect, taken out of the conflict.

Its backers agreed to consolidate behind legislation sponsored by the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars and Disabled American Veterans. Only approval by the full Patman steering committee, which is regarded as certain, was yet to be obtained.

Bonus leaders predicted passage in the house within a week or ten days.

Meeting for the first time, senate Democrats authorized Majority Leader Robinson, Democrat, Arkansas, to talk with Mr. Roosevelt before the bonus campaign reaches the floor. Robinson, who has forecast "executive approval" for the right kind of bonus bill, said he would go to the White House as quickly as the "opportunity arises."

Left in the forefront of the campaign were these measures:

1. The veterans' bill, estimated by the supporting organizations to cost $1,000,000,000 immediately, and providing no definite method of raising the money. It would refund interest on loans on adjusted service certificates, cancel unpaid interest, and allow veterans not desiring to cash the certificates to draw interest on them.

2. The Byrns-Steiwer senate bill, likewise setting up no specific method of payment. It would provide 97 per cent of full cash value of the certificates now and 100 per cent if they were not cashed until 1938.

Although many bonus supporters said they believed the president, to be consistent, would veto any bonus

WALMSLEY HITS STATE MACHINE

Says Group's Protest Of Probe Was Caused By Fear Of Exposure

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 4.—(AP)—Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley tonight charged that state administration candidates' protest against activities of the congressional elections committee in connection with the January 21 primary election arose from fear of exposure.

The mayor, in address broadcast over a local radio station, answered his critics, including Governor O. K. Allen, who in an address before a meeting called in protest against the congressional comittee's "meddling" in Louisiana political affairs attacked Walmsley and threatened to remove the mayor from office.

"Mr. Allen and his cohorts last night decried a congressional investigation in the state of Louisiana," Mayor Walmsley said, "making inquiry in

HIGH COURT MAY RULE MONDAY ON LEGALITY OF AAA

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—(AP)—a capital buzzing with political turmoil speculated tonight on the possibility of supreme court rulings Monday on the constitutionality of the AAA and other New Deal legislation.

The high tribunal heard arguments in December on cases involving the original and amended agricultural adjustment acts, the Tennessee valley act, and the Bankhead cotton control law.

Some observers, bearing in mind the shortening of the court's customary holiday recess by one week, thought opinions on one or more of the cases would be forthcoming when the tribunal convenes Monday at noon.

Others believed there would be further delay of a week or longer before the rulings—significant both economically and politically—would be forthcoming.

TO SHUN SCHOOLS

Mary Belle Spencer, 16, above, and her sister, Victoria, 14, below, will go on being "unrepressed," away from "public school perils." Their father, Dr. Richard V. Spencer, of Chicago Heights, Ill., has been acquitted by a jury of a charge of violating the state education law, in allowing them to educate themselves at home in their own way. Neither ever has attended a public school.

LINDBERGHS END TRIP TO WALES

Heavy Police Guard Thrown Around Home Of Kinsman At Llandaff

LLANDAFF, Wales, Jan. 4.—(AP)—The Charles A. Lindberghs arrived in this secluded Welsh community tonight to end a dramatic journey from America in search of sanctuary and a heavy police guard was immediately thrown about their haven.

They went to the home of J. L. Morgan, father-in-law of Mrs. Lindbergh's late sister. They are expected to remain there several weeks, at least during the week of January 13—when Bruno Richard Hauptmann is scheduled to die for the murder of their first son.

The Lindberghs, who left Liverpool yesterday by automobile, drove up to the Morgan residence shortly after dark in a large limousine with the blinds drawn.

After ten minutes of cautious reconnoitering and scooting off in sud-

RATE OF DEATHS IN U. S. REMAINS SAME DURING TWO YEARS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—(AP)—The nation's death rate from all causes as indicated today in reports from 86 cities to the commerce department, remained unchanged in 1935 as compared with 1934.

The rate in both years was 11.4 per thousand of population for the 86 as a whole, but there were substantial fluctuations in the individual cities. Total deaths in 1935 was 424,969, against 423,995 in 1934.

The lowest rate in 1935 was 7.4 in Yonkers, N. Y., although Queensboro, part of New York City, and itself as large as many cities, showed a rate of only 6.4. Other cities around these figures were Dely and Flint, Mich., with 7.8.

The highest rate was in the negro population of Washington, D. C., where 23.5 per thousand died.

CLARENCE CHAMBERLIN IS UNHURT IN PLANE MISHAP

OPELIKA, Ala., Jan. 4.—(AP)—Col. Clarence Chamberlin, trans-Atlantic flyer, and a party of Montgomerians escaped injury at the Auburn-Opelika airport near here this afternoon as the dual-motored, 18-passenger plane Chamberlin was flying nosed over in a take-off from the muddy field.

The accident occurred shortly after Chamberlin, on a barnstorming trip from Atlanta to Montgomery, landed at the L-shaped airport to pick up a group of visitors from the capital city invited to ride back from Opelika.

CHIROPRACTOR IS HUNTED IN DEATH OF YOUNG DOCTOR

Fugitive Alleged To Have Threatened Specialist 3 Months Ago

POLICE SAY EFFORT WAS MADE TO SCALP VICTIM

Body Of Dr. Peacock Found In Automobile; Fatally Shot In Head

CHICAGO, Jan. 4.—(AP)—An intensive hunt for an unnamed chiropractor was pressed tonight by police seeking solution of the savage killing of Dr. Silber C. Peacock, 40, brilliant young child specialist.

First Assistant State's Attorney Wilbert Crowley said his investigators had a "good lead" on a man who threatened the pediatrician three months ago and that his apprehension was expected soon.

Summerdale district police said they had been told the chiropractor stormed into Peacock's office and accused him, to Peacock's amazement, of performing an illegal operation.

The desire of authorities to shield their moves to overtake the slayer resulted in only a perfunctory hearing before an inquest which was adjourned until Jan. 21 at the prompting of the prosecutor's office.

Summerdale police, however, received the formal report of coroner's physicians which emphasized the enraged brutality of the doctor's slayer. It asserted that the killer who lured Peacock from his home Thursday night on the pretext he was wanted to treat a sick child did not rest when he had shot him fatally through the forehead, but evidently had attempted to scalp the victim, also. Nine knife wounds completely encircling the head were found, Police Captain Martin McCormack said.

The grief stricken widow, Mrs. Ruth Peacock, testified her husband received a telephone call at 10:15 p. m. Thursday night. Just as they were preparing to retire and after a brief conversation changed from pajamas to street attire and then he departed, apparently to answer a call for professional aid. She guessed it was from a new patient, Mrs. Peacock said, because she heard her husband state his charge was $5 and that his

LEAGUE IS ASKED FOR OBSERVERS

Ethiopia Appeals To Body To Send Men To Probe 'Violations'

GENEVA, Jan. 4.—(AP)—Ethiopia, charging that Italy planned "even more callous" violations of the rules of international warfare, appealed to the League of Nations tonight to send a commission to the fronts to investigate and fix responsibility.

A note from Addis Ababa implored the league to prevent atrocities, asserting Italy had announced through its press that a ruthless war of extermination was to be waged in Ethiopia.

"On several occasions Ethiopia has addressed to the league telegrams and statements announcing numerous violations of the laws of war committed by Italian military authorities in the war of aggression which Italy is waging against Ethiopia in disregard of her international undertakings," said the message.

"Italy, being no longer able to deny certain crimes which attracted world-

CLEVELAND DEAR RAPS HYPOCRISY

Home Ruler Scoffs At Allen's Saying He Wants Fair Election

(By Staff Correspondent)

MINDEN, Jan. 4.—Congressman Cleveland Dear, candidate for governor on the Home Rule ticket, denounced what he described as the "hypocrisy" of Governor O. K. Allen's protestations of desiring an honest election January 21 in his address here tonight.

"After saying there would be a fair election, 'Oily' Oscar Allen ousted the members of the boards of election supervisors who announced in favor of giving the Home Rule candidates equal representation," Congressman Dear said, "but 'Oily' Oscar Allen has not ousted the boards of election supervisors which have not given the Home Rule candidates adequate representation. Governor Allen has been talking one way and acting another."

"Leaders of the Maestri-dominated state machine stand unmasked as deliberate despoilers of the sovereignty and political rights of a free people," Congressman Dear declared. "Caught red-handed in a plot to steal an election which they could not otherwise carry, they are raising the familiar cry of 'wolf' in a barefaced attempt to hoodwink the people. It is an old trick of the smooth criminal to yell 'fire' when the populace is at his heels. Protests against federal interference in Louisiana are so patently attempts to evade the real issue of crooked elections, that no one is fooled by them—not even the state machine leaders themselves.

"For the interest of Washington in the forthcoming Democratic primaries in this state, the state machine is alone to blame. Ever since the primary system of selecting Democratic nominees had been in effect in Louisiana, the practice authorized by law had been to separate state and congressional primaries. A dominated and venal state legislature, meeting in 1934, united them. There was no sane reason, other than the operation of selfish machine politics, for abandonment of the old system. State officers to be elected on January 21 will take their seats in May; but the federal officers to be chosen at the same time will not begin their terms until January, 1937. There would have been

FASCIST AVIATORS MAKE AIR ATTACK ON U. S. HOSPITAL

Message To Red Cross Indicates No One Was Injured By Bombs

ROOSEVELT SPEECH MAY HAVE EFFECT UPON WAR

Statesmen Differ Sharply On Results Of American President's Views

(By Associated Press)

Italian bombs screamed death messages in Ethiopia Saturday while statesmen of the world read President Roosevelt's words on peace and neutrality.

An American hospital, the Ethiopian government announced, was among the targets of the fascist bombs.

It was at Daggah, on the southern front. A message to a Red Cross official in Addis Ababa indicated there were no fatalities.

But in another sector, the northern, the government announced ten Ethiopians were killed and 15 wounded when the Italians dropped 3,000 bombs.

A Swedish Red Cross worker in the unit which was bombed at Dolo last Monday died the next day, it was disclosed. A surveyor, Dr. Fried Hylander, who was brought to Addis Ababa because of his wounds, said the raid was unjustified and that the Italians intentionally attacked the Red Cross camp.

An official Rome communique said a fascist plane was brought down in flames Friday and that its four occupants were killed.

WORLD'S STATESMEN STUDY ROOSEVELT SPEECH

Capitals of the world after eagerly studying President Roosevelt's message to congress agreed Saturday it might have a profound effect upon the critical European-African crisis—but there was a sharp divergence of opinion as to what that effect would be.

PRESIDENT'S DARE IS NOT ACCEPTED

Republicans Criticize Speech But Don't Try To Repeal New Laws

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—(AP)—Amid new Republican criticism of President Roosevelt's annual message, a matter apparently destined to reverberate for months, congressional leaders today smoothed the way for quick action on two of their leading issues.

Actual opening of floor debate on both neutrality and bonus legislation within little more than a week appeared as a distinct possibility. Some leaders predicted senate or house passage of one or both might be possible within that time.

The day passed, however, without any leading member of congress moving to accept the dare flung by the president last night—a dare to try openly for "repeal" of a long list of New Deal enactments.

Senator Hastings of Delaware, chairman of the Republican senatorial campaign committee, who led the criticism of the executive's message, took some notice of the defy.

"It is true that the way is open," Hastings said, "but unfortunately the president's control over the congress

CLOTHING WORN BY THELMA EXAMINED BY CRIMINOLOGIST

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 4.—(AP)—A criminologist examined the clothing of Thelma Todd today in an attempt to establish "at least" the place where the blonde film comedienne met death.

Frank Gompert, sheriff's office expert, began with a study of the dancing slippers Miss Todd wore when her body was found Dec. 16 in her automobile, parked in her hillside garage.

"If we can prove she walked up that hill, the place of her death will at least be established," George Rochester, grand jury foreman, said.

"If not, the case will be broken wide open again."

Grand jury witnesses have contended Miss Todd, returning from a gay party, walked to the garage and either attempted to drive the car away, or occupied it to rest. An inquest verdict termed her death accidental, due to exhaust fumes, but recommended further investigation.

The grand jury investigation will be resumed Monday.

Proceeds from the movie will be used for his care in a Swiss insane asylum.

LASSITER FAVORS WILCOX INQUIRY

Says It Is Prompted By Spirit Of Fair Play In Election

Albin P. Lassiter, president of the Young Democratic clubs of Louisiana, in a statement made Saturday, explained the purpose of Congressman Mark Wilcox in making an investigation in connection with the holding of the primary election on January 21.

Mr. Lassiter's statement follows:

"Because of the undue criticism of the election supervision in Louisiana by the Hon. Mark Wilcox, member of congress, I believe the electorate of the state is due a true explanation for the reason Mr. Wilcox came into the state.

"Some months ago, the congressional committee on elections let it be known through the press that they would not come into Louisiana on the complaints of candidates alone, for they had no interest in the election of any candidate or candidates as individuals or factions if any other citizens of the state desired their presence, they should let it be known.

"The Young Democratic club of Louisiana, in executive session in Alexandria on October 20, 1935, resolved after due and lengthy consideration to request supervision of the approaching election and any neccessary investigation by the congressional committee. This was directed to the chairman of the committee with copies to the speaker of the house and Hon. Frank Wickham, president of the Young Democratic clubs of America.

"This action was prompted by the feeling of fair play and good sportsmanship which we knew should exist in elections as well as athletic con-

RESOLUTION ASKS FOR FEDERAL MEN TO WATCH POLLS

Citizens At Mass Meeting Say Equal Representation Is Denied

OSCAR ALLEN THREATENS TO ORDER OUT TROOPERS

Dear Declares 'Provisional Government' For State May Be Urged

CLINTON, La., Jan. 4.—(AP)—The stationing of a United States marshal at every East Feliciana parish voting precinct at the Louisiana primary election Jan. 21 was urged here today by mass meeting resolution.

Complaining that the parish board of election supervisors, subordinate to Gov. O. K. Allen, had denied state administration opponents poll representation, citizens packing the East Feliciana courthouse petitioned a congressional committee investigating Louisiana election procedure for federal ballot supervision.

East Feliciana parish has been a consistent stronghold of hostility to the political organization of the late Senator Huey P. Long who before his death had a statute enacted empowering parish boards of election supervisors, two of whose three members are appointed by the governor, to name poll officials.

Mayor G. C. Decuir of Clinton, who presided at the meeting, said the action followed a promise by the parish board of "equal representation" at the polls and then an allotment of only five out of 60 poll commissioners to anti-administrationists.

The mass meeting resolution "condemned" the board for "denying representation" to anti-administrationists, and called upon Rep. J. Mark Wilcox of Florida, chairman of a house subcommittee now investigating Louisiana election machinery, to supply federal marshals for poll service.

The text of the resolution:

"Be it resolved by the people of East Feliciana in mass meeting assembled at Clinton on the 4th day of January, 1936, that we condemn the action of the supervisors of election of the parish of East Feliciana in denying representation at the polls to the anti-administration candidates as unfair, undemocratic and subversive of the democratic form of government, that we call upon the congressional fair election committee, Hon. J. Mark Wilcox, chairman, to furnish us with a United States marshal at each precinct in the parish to demand and see that a fair count is had and true returns made of the votes cast at the primary election on Jan. 21, 1936."

The resolution was drafted by George J. Woodside, Miss Julia Redhead, B. A. Fletcher, C. Percy and J. O. Rourke.

POLITICS REACHES BOILING POINT

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 4.—(AP)—Louisiana's politics reached the sizzling point today but did not boil over.

The heat that the late Huey Long turned on was missing last night when his lieutenants met in municipal auditorium and issued threats to their enemies and made claims that they would carry the Jan. 21 Democratic primary by huge majorities.

Also missing was the wit and humor and the ridiculous castigation of his political enemies that Long regaled his audiences with and made friend and foe alike laugh, whether they wanted to smile or fight.

Today the electorate of Louisiana appeared to consider the election campaign just another political battle lacking the seriousness of the Long campaign of the past few years when the fire was kept aflame by the intrepid activities of Long and his whacks were delivered in the most unexpected quarters.

Last night in the big campaign rally of the Long forces here, those who seek to walk in the footsteps of Long,

DATE FOR MURDER TRIAL OF SLAYER OF HUSBAND FIXED

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Jan. 4.—(AP)—The murder trial of Mrs. Daisy Alexander Root, 30, accused of slaying her young husband as the aftermath of a night club argument over a "cigaret girl," today was formally set for January 20 by Mike Cohen, criminal court clerk.

Mrs. Root is at liberty under bond of $7,500. She was held in the county jail for several weeks.

Her husband, Brenton Root, 32, son of the Rev. Benjamin F. Root, Chicago clergyman, was shot to death at his home the morning of November 2.

W. T. McLain, district attorney general, would not indicate today whether he will seek a death sentence. The indictment charges first degree murder. Death in the electric chair or life imprisonment are possible under the charge.

Bruno Says He Will Never Let Son Make Prison Visit

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 4.—(AP)—Bruno Richard Hauptmann resolved today never to see his 26-months-old son, Manfred, in the death house at state prison.

Only nine days before the week of January 13—the week set for him to die—Hauptmann showed no signs of breaking or of nervousness, and told his wife, Anna, and his guards he felt certain he would not go to the chair.

He told Mrs. Hauptmann also he would not take advantage of a prison regulation permitting a condemned man to see his children once during the last week.

"I don't belong in here," he told her. "I won't see my child in here."

Hauptmann last saw the boy while awaiting trial at Flemington for the kidnap-murder of the Lindbergh baby. Twice during Hauptmanns ten months in the death house, his wife brought the child to Trenton, but left him outside the prison.

Mrs. Hauptmann smiled broadly as she left the prison today after her third visit of the week. Previously she had called no oftener than once a week.

"I wish you could see him," she said. "He looks fine, and is cheerful and confident."

She again denied reports she had booked passage for herself and son to leave the country.

"My place," she said, "is always with Richard."

Asked if she would go abroad if "things do not turn out as you hope," she smiled again.

"Things will turn out all right," she replied.

An assistant state's attorney ended the inquest by saying "I do not believe it is necessary to question Mrs. Peacock further" when she hesitated after being asked by the deputy coroner:

ing to consider Hauptmann's appeal for clemency was still unset and Governor Harold G. Hoffman's office let it be known it would not be announced over the week-end.

Members of the court were told at their meeting Monday to keep Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week open for possible call. The court of errors and appeals, of which seven of the pardons court are members, will meet Thursday and Friday.

A session Monday was considered unlikely because no notice has been given state or defense attorneys.

It was learned today that Dr. John F. (Jafsie) Condon, the Lindbergh ransom intermediary, who has been making appearances in New Jersey theaters the past week, has been requested by Attorney General David T. Wilentz, Hauptmann's prosecutor, not to appear in Perth Amboy, Wilentz's home town.

Rocco Monaco, Tony Danna, Joe Lapietra, Joe Cernigliaro, directors; Joseph Airoldi, sergeant-at-arms.

The Northeast Center of Louisiana State university will reopen tomorrow morning at 8:45 after having been closed for the holidays.

The West Monroe city council will hold the first meeting of the new year at the city hall tomorrow night.

Plans are under way for the annual meeting of the Ouachita Valley council of the Boy Scouts of America in Monroe on January 14, according to O. H. Black, executive. After afternoon sessions the culminating event will be a banquet at the parish house of Grace church at 6:30 p.m.

Already approximately one mile of paving has been laid from the Sterlington intersection of the extension of Louisville avenue back toward the city. Worl has been slowed down for the holidays but will be resumed this week, it was stated.

On Tuesday and Wednesday of last week, a start was made on the pouring of the counter weight on the east side of the bascule span of the new Louisville avenue bridge. This week it is said that the work of pouring cement flooring for the bascule span will be initiated.

Miss Lucyle Godwin, director of the Monroe recreation department, is leaving at once for St. Louis, Mo., where she will remain for a month to pursue a course of advanced work in recreation.

Games and contests were enjoyed throughout the evening and delicious refreshments were served by the hostess, assisted by Miss Louise Hogan.

Mrs. Arch O'Neal entertained members of the Needlecraft club recently. A delicious salad course with chocolate and fruit cake were served to the following: Mrs. C. L. Madden, Mrs. M. E. Kidd, Mrs. Willie Bagwell, Mrs. C. L. Faulkner, Mrs. C. L. Mondors, Mrs. H. L. Willis, Mrs. J. A. O'Neal and Mrs. H. M. Bagly.

A second meeting on "Finding What Caused the Depression and How to Get Out of It" was held recently, sponsored by Gene Boddie of Ruston and Mrs. Bill Bagwell.

The first meeting was held in Ruston in December. Mr. Boddie and Mrs. Bagwell will attend a series of nine parish-wide meetings which will be held under the supervision of J. A. Shealy, county agent, and Miss Sophie Stone, home demonstration agent of Lincoln parish. The object of these meetings is to further the endeavor of agricultural people along their own particular lines.

Following the meeting, Mrs. Bagwell served coffee and fruit cake to those present.

Mrs. A. S. Drew and daughter, Allen, are the guests of Mrs. Drew's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Richmond.

Mr. and Mrs. Truett Burnside of Wyatt were recent visitors.

Little Miss Alice Frances Ford returned to her home in New Orleans recently after spending several days with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Ford.

Mrs. Dolly Ewing of Wisner is the guest of her sister, Mrs. J. A. O'Neal.

nations which have "reverted to the old belief in the law of the sword."

In some French quarters, fear was expressed that instead of hindering war preparations, the message might increase them. These sources said application of an oil embargo would be easier because of Mr. Roosevelt's stand.

In all major capitals the words of the American leader were studied intently and were prominently displayed in newspapers.

Well-informed sources in Rome said the Italian government "ought to be" satisfied with the president's stand toward neutrality. They predicted Great Britain would drop any move toward further sanctions.

There were two schools of thought in London. One said the proposed oil sanction against Italy is temporarily, if not permanently dead, because it is unnecessary and too dangerous.

Another held that if congress adopts neutrality legislation withholding oil shipments to Italy as an implement of warfare, the League of Nations would go ahead with an oil boycott.

The league council is to consider the question at a meeting January 20.

Harrisonburg

Mr. and Mrs. Glyn Seffens and son, Glyn, of Monticello were holiday visitors in the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Dosher.

Returning to Harrisonburg High school after spending the holidays out of the city were: Mr. J. Bailey, who spent the holidays in Manifest with relatives; Miss Mildred Seal, who spent the holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Seal, of Sicily Island; Miss Iona Moses, who was entertained by Mr. Bill Worden at Kingsford, Tenn.; Miss Delta Lanier and Mr. Sidney Lanier, who spent Christmas with their parents, and Miss Lucille Bennette, who enjoyed the Yuletide with relatives in Winnsboro.

Mrs. Smith Oden and children, Bobbit and Nelwyn, of Logansport are enjoying a visit in Harrisonburg as the guests of Miss Fannie Sargent.

Miss Shirley Wren has returned to Harrisonburg after spending the holidays in Shreveport.

Miss Gladys Lee has returned to Camp Beauregard after a very pleasant visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Lee.

Louisiana State university students, who spent their holidays in Harrisonburg, are as follows: Kellie Moses, Lansing McKillips, Jennings McKillips, John Monroe Kirby, Elmer Kirby, George Johnson, Robert Earl Johnson, Joe R. Bethard, Woodrow Blackman, Woodrow Radford, J. C. Williams, Homer Townsend, J. K. Stone, Jim H. McGee, Berdette Trichel and P. W. Caleham. Northeast Center students, spending the holidays in Harrisonburg, were: Shelton Trichel and Dave Boothe. Miss Vira Mae Beasley, student at Louisiana State Normal, also enjoyed the holidays at Harrisonburg.

Misses Fannie, Nell and Dorothy Sargent enjoyed a visit recently in Logansport, guests of Mr. and Mrs. Smith Oden and family.

Mr. Buatt M. Bethard returned to New Orleans recently after a delightful visit in the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bethard.

Miss Lulu Routon is enjoying a visit in Roseland, Fla., as the guest of her aunt, Mrs. Lulu Ross.

CORN WANTED

Farmers in the vicinity of Sutsien, China, may be taught to raise corn according to the American method. Now they harvest it before it is ripe, shell it with infinite labor and spend the rest of the summer and most of the autumn in drying it in the sun to prevent mould. Experts are expected to visit them and try to induce them to let the ears remain on the stalks until ripe, according to the American idea.

legislation, the Byrns-Steiwer proposal has been spoken of as approaching the type which he might possibly see his way clear to approve.

The president has not spoken his mind on the new bonus drive.

While senate Democrats were arranging to carry out an agreement of last session for prompt bonus consideration in the finance committee, bi-partisan support was put behind the issue. Senator McNary, Republican, Oregon, the minority leader, said he would vote for it as long as it carried no inflation.

Despite the discarding of the Patman plan in the house, the inflation question was not entirely quieted. Senator Thomas, Democrat, Oklahoma, said he would seek to amend any bill to provide payment in new currency, based on the government's silver and gold surpluses.

As an alternative, he suggested payment through bonds to be deposited in Federal Reserve banks under contract arrangements and retired with appropriations now made annually for the adjusted service certificate reserve fund.

Thomas, added, though, he would support an "orthodox measure" should all his proposals be tossed aside.

the matters that the national government has authorized, and on the other hand they petitioned the congress to look into a killing (the assassination of Senator Huey Long) that took place in the state of Louisiana which Mr. Allen and the attorney-general have full authority to investigate.

"In doing this they are trying to dodge their own responsibility, surrendering state rights to the congress of the United States. They are either yellow or they know there is nothing to the charges that they have been trying to spread about throughout the state. They won't investigate them before the election, because they know that their charges are baseless."

Walmsley ridiculed the administrationist attack on the congressional inquiry as a "usurpation of self-government." He charged the "Long" machine with destroying self-government in the state, declared the administration candidates had no interest in it and that it was anything "but a constitutional government they desired."

"When they find themselves about to be brought before the bar of justice in a situation they will not be able to control," he declared, "they can only cringe, cry out about invasions, and lament that they are not being dealt with fairly and justly.

"The congress of the United States will not be bulldozed by these people," Walmsley said. "Their counter-attacks as smoke screens will be penetrated. They have fooled the people for the last time"

Walmsley declared he was not "worried" about Governor Allen's threat to "put him out." He declared he was not worrying about "their ravings."

Development by the United States of the all-metal fighting plane several years ago rendered obsolete all other types of military craft, both here and abroad.

SUCCEEDS GOMEZ

Provisional President Eleazar Lopez Contreas of Venezuela is pictured as he marched in the funeral procession at Caracas for General Juan Vincente Gomez, whose 27-year dictatorship ended when he succumbed to a long illness. Gomez's death was the signal for a series of disorders in which more than 40 persons have been killed.

Louis Masur left Saturday night for Chicago to attend the national retailers shoe convention at which the feature will be a speech by General Hugh S. Johnson, former head of the NRA.

makes this suggestion an impracticable one."

He added that to him the executive's address "sounded like the words of a clever politician who had his back to the wall."

Outside of congress, Frank Knox, Chicago publisher who is being discussed as a possibility for the Republican presidential nomination, asserted an alternative program was "not difficult" to compose.

He suggested a seven-point program, including drastic cuts in federal expenditures, a balanced budget every year, a sound currency, unemployment and old age pensions under state laws, removal of government from all fields of private enterprise, opposition to farm production restrictions, and strict enforcement of the anti-trust laws.

White House officials said meanwhile that most of the more than 300 messages received before noon were laudatory of the address which took New Deal critics sharply to task and castigated "autocracy and aggression" abroad.

Twenty-eight messages received were described as unfavorable. The criticism was said to have been that the address was political, a view taken by the Republicans. Nor did White House officials make any effort to deny that part of the speech could be described as of a political nature.

With his annual message behind him, the president devoted most of his time today preparing to send his budget message to the Capitol Monday.

During the day, senate Democrats, in their first party conference, decided to push bonus and neutrality proposals. They designated Senator Robinson, the majority leader, to discuss the veterans' payment issue with the president.

Republican leaders planned to defer conferences on strategy until the president's budget message is submitted and its full contents noted. Aside from neutrality, the chief executive gave little hint of legislative matters in his annual message.

MUNITIONS PROBE TO AID NEUTRALITY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—(AP)—Senate munitions committee members relied tonight upon their forthcoming investigation of J. P. Morgan and company to draw increased support for drastic neutrality legislation.

Senator Clark, Democrat, Missouri, predicted that disclosures in the inquiry beginning Tuesday "will have the effect of bringing support for more mandatory control" of loans and credits to belligerents.

As administration leaders mapped a quick pace for consideration of neutrality proposals already before congress, Clark and Chairman Nye, Republican, North Dakota, of the munitions group prepared to introduce their own bill Monday.

On the next day, they will begin questioning J. P. Morgan and Thomas W. Lamont, a Morgan partner, on the effect of World war financing in swinging the United States into the conflict in 1917.

While Clark said he expected "nothing especially sensational" to come out of the questioning on Morgan and company activities as wartime fiscal agent in America for Great Britain, he added:

"Evidence will be brought out which will leave no doubt of the effect loans and credits extended to the allies had on influencing American entry into the war."

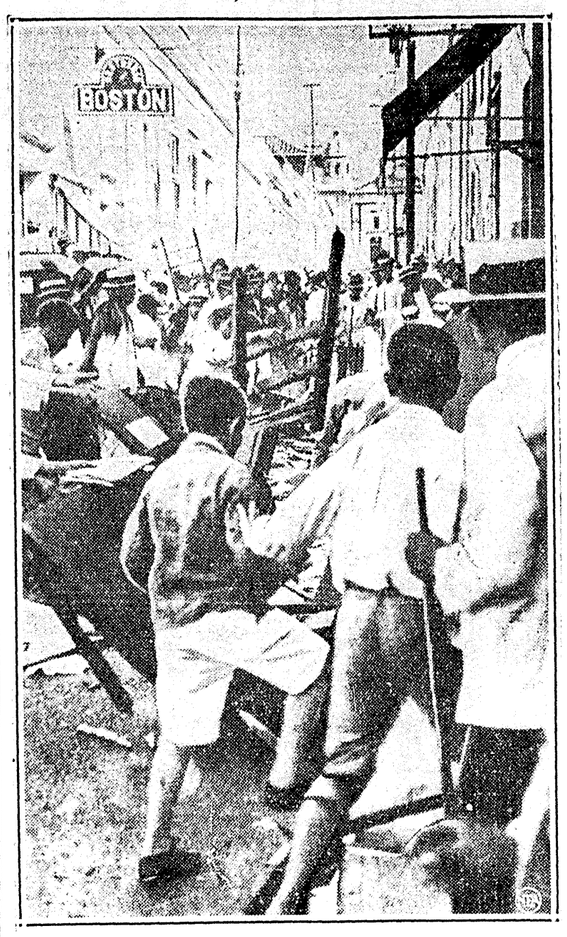
GOMEZ DEAD, VENEZUELA RIOTS



How death, stilling the iron hand of a dictator, can unleash long pent-up mob resentment is shown in this remarkable picture of a riot in Caracas, Venezuela, following the death of Dictator Juan Vincente Gomez. Vandals are busy venting their fury by destroying the equipment of a newspaper that had supported the Gomez regime. More than 40 were killed in this and other Venezuela riots.

their departed leader, threatened to call out the national guard to preserve a fair election.

Their opponents, the "Home Rulers," took consolation in the congressional inquiry into voters registration and steps to insure a fair election and Cleveland Dear, anti-Long candidate for governor, declared that a "provisional government" for Louisiana with federal arms might be asked.

The biggest fight of the current campaign is over equal representation at the polls on election day to Long and anti-Long factions.

The anti-Longs contend that the election laws passed by Long's controlled legislature place control of the election machinery in the hands of the governor, O. K. Allen, though appointments of local officials while Governor Allen says the other side is seeking to gain control and that he will use the troops if necessary to insure a fair election.

"If one parish blinks," Allen said last night in the mass meeting, "and the parish officials don't do right, I will call out the national guard and run this thing myself."

"I am the governor of Louisiana," Allen yelled to be cheered by his crowd.

Allen, who is running for the unfinished term of Long, filled the gigantic municipal auditorium to standing room. Dead did likewise and Long, when he spoke in political campaigns, also overflowed the building.

But Long is dead and his political dictatorship is at stake.

The French air force is equipping an entire squadron of planes with "motor-cannons."

tests. In the many annual football, baseball and basketball game between Louisiana State univeristy and Tulane, or Louisiana Tech and Louisiana State Normal, or Louisiana Southwestern college and Louisiana college or Centenary and its opponents, there were always impartial referees and umpires. None of their teams or student bodies have ever questioned the wisdom of this procedure. We believed, in view of the circumstances, that all candidates and factions would welcome a referee to insure the voters a fair and square election. We know that the majority of the good people of this state welcome the efforts of Mr. Wilcox with the feeling that the candidates of their choice will be given an opportunity to become their representatives of government without taint or foul methods.

"Mr. Wilcox has to date acted impartially and purely in a supervisory and advisory capacity. His conferences with candidates and faction leaders have been pleasant and with the spirit of cooperation. The majority of the election supervisors of the parishes have expressed a desire to cooperate with him to asure fair play on Jan. 21.

"The Young Democratic clubs are non-political and non-partisan in so far as local politics are concerned. We are only interested in preserving the fundamental principles of democracy in the several states in the nation."

A DEADLY STRUGGLE ENSUED BETWEEN OUR HERO AND THE CROOK, WHILE THE SHIP WHIPPED OFF INTO A CRAZY SPIN.

YOU WILL PULL A GUN ON ME--- WILL YOU--

GOSH!---- I ALMOST WENT WITH HIM--

TH' KID'S WASHED UP, ANYWAY-- HE'LL NEVER PULL OUTTA THAT SPIN SO CLOSE TO EARTH!

GEE! THOSE HILLS-- ARE-- COMING UP FAST!

BETTY-LOU HAS REACHED THE CAR AND IS ABOUT TO ESCAPE HER CAPTORS, BUT ANY-THING IS LIABLE TO HAPPEN, FOR THE THUGS HAVE HEARD THE NOISE OF THE AUTO STARTER-

THANK HEAVEN! I'VE FINALLY GOT IT STARTED!

O--OH---! THEY'RE SHOOTING AT ME!

DON'T KILL HER, YOU FOOL!---- I WANT HER ALIVE!

I'M JUST TRYIN' TO PUNCTURE HER TIRES, CHIEF!

WE'LL EASILY OVERTAKE HER! THAT CAR'S LOW ON GAS---- COME ON!

The Machine—Unmasking Its Ugliness

DURING the last few months certain glib catch-phrases have become more or less familiar to the voters of this state, as they have been uttered by spokesmen for the machine administration that is seeking perpetuation of its power.

All the changes have been rung on such terms as "friend of the people," "free school books," "good roads and free bridges," "share-the-wealth."

These are vote-catching phrases that will not bear the light of casual analysis.

The effort is made to impose the thought on the public mind that the machine administration is "the friend of the people" which has provided the advantages and conveniences represented in free school books, good roads and free bridges.

It requires no great amount of intelligence to realize that the school books, highways and bridges are in no sense a gift to the people by the present state government. Those advantages come to the people from the hard-earned dollars contributed by the taxpayers of this state.

Instead of being friends of the people, the administration machine has lent itself to a system of robbery of the people by permitting such practices as those confessed on the witness stand by administration leaders themselves, who admitted in the Shushan trial that money paid by the people for the purchase of concrete for the building of good roads had gone into the pockets of friends of the machine.

MACHINE candidates in the present election campaign have even gloated over the practice.

"Suppose we did steal a few millions!" jeered one of the administration leaders in a speech in north Louisiana a few days ago. "We gave you good roads, didn't we?"

To that jeering taunt, we answer emphatically, No, the machine did not GIVE the people good roads or anything else. The taxpayers BOUGHT AND PAID FOR the good roads with their very life-blood, just as they bought and paid for the free school books and the free bridges.

In that speech the candidate exhibited the utter contempt the machine feels for the common people who are willing to be duped by the thought that the administration is a "friend of the people."

MACHINE candidates, thoroughly convinced that the poor voter is ready to believe anything they say, have even gone so far as to baldly assert that "should the Home Rule ticket be elected the first thing it would do would be to tear up the good roads and tear down the free bridges."

Would any sane person believe that a property owner, having scrimped and saved to pay for a new structure on his property, would deliberately destroy it? The property owners of Louisiana built the bridges and constructed the roads. They paid a high price, it is true, because of the chicanery of a ruthless machine. But they are not going to destroy what has cost them so dearly.

And the term, "share the wealth," which has been made the catch-phrase to hoodwink thousands of poor but honest voters, what does it mean in the terms of the machine administration?

Has there been the slightest evidence that the machine has any intention of sharing the wealth of its members with the common people of the state? Absolutely none.

When the present administration machine had an opportunity to reduce the cost of automobile license tags to that comparable with other states of the union, did they do it? They did not. They made a great show of a slight reduction, but today auto license fees in Louisiana are amongst the highest paid in any state in the country.

Home Rule leaders have definitely pledged themselves to reduce auto licenses to a flat $3 a year—a very definite program of sharing the wealth, as contrasted with the failure of the machine to give effect to some of its promises when it had the opportunity.

The administration machine promised to reduce farm and home assessments at least $2,000. Instead it made a great flourish of offering only half a loaf as a fulfillment of its promise. The Home Rule candidates are committed to the abolition of homestead taxes on all small farms and small homes.

THE administration machine had an opportunity to adopt an old age pension law to provide for the aged and the sick and the afflicted who are unable to provide against the infirmities of years. Instead of doing that, they flouted the opportunity. When the United States government offered the state some of the millions that are to be used for social security, the "friend of the people" grandiloquently announced that "Louisiana does not need federal aid for its poor; we will take care of them ourselves." But did the "friend of the people" institute any measures for "sharing wealth" with the aged and the afflicted? He did not.

Here was a great opportunity to give practical demonstration of sincerity in professing friendship for the people. But so far from embracing it, the administration machine deliberately and arbitrarily placed a barrier in the way to prevent federal aid for the helpless. Not only that, but no effort whatever was made to fulfill the vaunted assurance that "Louisiana can take care of its own."

Seven extra sessions of the legislature have been held in the last two years, but in none of them was any legislation introduced to care for the aged. The nearest semblance to any program for the aged was the law permitting the parishes of the state to enact a gasoline tax to provide relief for unemployables. Here again, it was not the administration machine which gave that aid to the people, but the people themselves—the poor farmers, as well as other users of trucks and motor cars—who have paid the bill, and are still paying it.

The Home Rule candidates are pledged to immediately enact legislation at the next session of the legislature which will permit the state to take advantage of the federal government's program and insure $30 a month pensions for the aged.

Friendship for the people is demonstrated by deeds, not mere words.

NO friend will rob a man and then return to ask of him favors. Yet the machine administration has robbed the people of Louisiana of their rights and their liberties, and then has the consummate effrontery to ask for a return to power so that it may continue its policy of dictatorship and oppression.

The machine is what the term suggests, a contrivance designed to serve a purpose as ruthless as it is ugly. It is possessed of none of those inspirations that go with consideration for human needs and the public welfare. It exists to perpetuate in power a political organization that seeks its own selfish ends, not the freedom and happiness of the people.

The great Juggernaut of India was a machine, a horrid device representing a great god of power. Its priests demanded the sacrifice of human lives to appease and satisfy the lust of a soulless idol. The Juggernaut was no greater evil than a political machine that sacrifices human needs, especially the needs of the aged and the helpless, while loudly proclaiming its hollow friendship for the people.

Popular indignation eventually destroyed the Juggernaut of India and the oppression that went with it. Today popular indignation in Louisiana has its opportunity to overthrow the machine that has set at naught the privileges of the people and denied to the weak and the poor and the aged their right to a share in human happiness.

EXPLANATION OF YESTERDAY'S CARTOON

THE TOWER OF SKULLS—For four centuries Turkey ruled over the Balkans, including what is now Bulgaria, Serbia and Rumania. In 1809, the Serbs rose in rebellion against their overlords. The Turkish army besieged them in Nish. When the rebels realized that their situation was hopeless, they blew themselves in the air, taking the besiegers with them. As a terrifying example, the Turks built the tower and placed in the pigeonholes 3,000 rebel skulls. Most of the skulls were removed and buried when the Serbs recovered their independence 68 years later. But the tower has remained standing to this day.

New Deal In Washington

By Rodney Dutcher

WASHINGTON. — Deliberations of the U. S. supreme court on the Hoosac Mills AAA test of course are as secret as the grave. But it's a good bet that the nine justices have been having a hot old time with the constitution's "general welfare clause."

"General welfare" is the biggest point in the AAA brief, which devotes nearly 100 pages to it. If the court validates the processing taxes on that point, the ruling will be much more far-reaching than the NRA Schechter case opinion and may have the effect of deciding the fate of housing, unemployment relief, social security, and other legislation.

Look at Article I, Section 8, the constitution. Congress is empowered therein:

"To lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts, and excises, to pay the debts and provide for the common defense and general welfare of the United States. . . ."

Lawyers have been arguing about that clause for a century and a half, but the supreme court has never directly passed on its meaning. Whenever the court has had the chance to do so, it has carefully ducked. That is, it has never wanted to rule that the constitution didn't say in this instance what it seemed to say and, on the other hand, it hasn't wanted to give congress a blank check for legislation.

Taxing Power Questioned

The question is whether congress is empowered to lay taxes to promote what it considers the general welfare, as it did in the agricultural adjustment act. If so it has a large field open to it in the use of the taxing power.

Government attorneys who wrote those 100 pages in their brief believe it is extremely significant that in every case where the court has been put on the spot as to "general welfare," it has always validated the law in question.

But invariably it has found another reason for validation, ignoring "general welfare."

Although the Democrats have always cast snoots at Alexander Hamilton and referred to him as the forefather of present-day Republicanism while themselves clinging to Jefferson—not to mention the latter's friend and political buddy, James Madison—it is to Hamilton they go in the AAA case.

Two Clashing Theories

The so-called Hamiltonian theory is that the clause gives congress power to tax and appropriate in order to promote the general welfare by means which may not be within the scope of the other congressional powers.

The Madisonian theory is that the clause limits the taxing power, refers to and is limited by subsequently enumerated powers (borrowing money, coining, establishing postoffices, declaring war, suppressing rebellion, and so on), and can tax only to carry out one of those powers. That is to say, that the "general welfare" clause has no meaning at all.

AAA lawyers insist the court can't reverse a policy existent since the beginning of the government.

See Loophole For Evils

The opposition argues that any broad interpretation of the clause opens the way to all sorts of evils, especially if the court upholds the AAA contention that what's for the general welfare is a matter for congress to decide and that the courts won't substitute their judgment for that of congress.

But supreme court styles change and just because Chief Justice Marshall once held that "the only security against abuse of the taxing power is found in the structure of government," and that "in imposing a tax the legislature acts on its constituents and this, in general, is sufficient protection against erroneous and oppressive taxation"—that doesn't mean the supreme court of today will uphold taxes on processors (which the consumer pays) for the benefit of farmers.

Use Hughes' Argument

Once Charles Evans Hughes, now chief justice, produced a superb brief using "general welfare" in behalf of the right of congress to establish Federal Land banks to provide credits for farmers. The supreme court upheld him.

And he presumably has been interested to observe that the New Deal lawyers have cited that case (Smith vs. Kansas City Title Co., 255 U. S. 180) four times in their brief.

But of course Hughes was an advocate then, not a judge.

LIQUOR REGULATIONS NAMED ON WEST SIDE

The same regulations that prevailed in West Monroe in 1935 regarding the regulation of the sale of liquor and beer will be continued through 1936, it was decided at a special meeting of the city council there the past week.

Under the provisions of the ordinance, retail liquor establishments will pay a license of $500 a year; establishments selling in unbroken packages for consumption off the premises will pay $250 and dealers in beer and other liquors containing not more than six per cent alcohol will pay a license of $25.

The boundaries of the area in which liquor may be sold also remain the same as last year, as do penalties for violation of the provisions of the ordinance.

Lights Of New York

By George Ross

NEW YORK.—This country will go daft before long about the daffiest song that's come out since "Piccolo Peet Went Tweet, Tweet on a Piccolo, Oh!" (Chorus, Refrain, Repeat).

The song I mean is "The Music Goes Around and Around" which, at last, is catching on, although many of us have been going pleasantly mad for months listening to those lunatic lyrics at a little place called the Onyx club. They just don't make sense. Listen: "You blow through here and the music goes down and round, oh, oh, listen to the jazz come out." Then repeat that 47 times. (Or more, if you like).

And yet, there is not a band in town that has not picked up this berserk roundelay. I've heard matronish ladies go delightfully ga-ga rendering the tune in respectable cafes, and an intimate friend has been ringing out "Oh-Ho, Ho-Oh" for days. It's just one of those things. If the craze keeps up, Mr. Mike Reilly and Mr. Ed Farley, who invented it, will have the nation in a trance.

Swinging Into Fame

How these gentlemen came about the melody is a story in itself. Mr. Reilly is a saxophonist, Mr. Farley a trumpet blower and they have both been on the fringes of Tin Pan Alley for years. Inspired composition is not in their line and, chiefly, they play by ear, holding all sheet music in contempt. They bang out a song any way they like and pay no attention to the notes. The technical word for their brand of rhythm is "Swing." A Swing musician doesn't care for E Flats or C Minors when they are written down and my suspicion is that he doesn't care much for Rachmaninoff and other musical clansmen A Swing addict holds himself aloof in a cult apart.

Horning In

Anyway, Mike Reilly and Ed Farley had been stirring up bedlam at the Onyx for their supper and trying to get along. One night, so the story goes, Mike turned to his colleague and muttered disconsolately, "Brother Ed, what's the use Where will we land? We get older every minute and the music goes around and around. You blow through here and I blow through there and the customers listen to the jazz come out. So what? I'm quitting.'

"Oh, ho! Ho, oh!" cooed Mr. Reilly. "I guess you're right." They returned to their instruments and in a solemn mood put their sentiments to song. They were so carried away by the curious refrain of their extemporaneous dirge that they played it over and over again. By the time that night had turned to dawn, the zany ditty was in the bag. Instead of quitting, the Messrs. Reilly and Farley hung around to discover themselves the creators of the most infectious musical fad since "Yes, We Have No Bananas."

It has taken several months for "The Music Goes Around and Around" to get around to all the coast to coast wave lengths, but try and keep it off now.

There doesn't seem to be enough wax for sufficient phonograph records of the song to meet the demand. All the major orchestra leaders including Guy Lombardo, Jack Denny, Isham Jones, Ozzie Nelson, Abe Lyman, Ben Bernie, etcetera, feature it in their dance programs. But with this slight difference: They play it from arranged orchestrations and follow the formula. Reilly and Farley still cling to Swing and spontaneous combustion at the Onyx.

More Truth Than Poetry

THE COLD

It rarely gets me bad enough
To keep me in the house;
But when I moan
And grouse and groan
To my long suffering spouse,
And when my temper's quick and hot
And cannot be controlled,
I know the symptoms—I have got A cold.

The Doctor does not sympathize,
He merely shakes his head;
Says, "Do your best
To get some rest,
And stay a week in bed.
Again I rise and pace the floor,
I cannot be consoled,
While every day grows worse and worse
My cold.

A cold, just nothing but a cold,
That's what he has to say;
I'd give my all,
Though it is small,
To keep that cold away.
But when one gets you in its grip
To fuss or fume is vain,
There is no help till it begins
To wane.

Youth Prepared For Hardship

By BRUCE CATTON

Sentimentalists have been quietly weeping into their beer over the passing of the sailing ship for many a weary year. But William McFee, veteran mariner and author, rises in the current issue of "Today" to remark that the sailing ship is still going strong.

To be sure, the old-time square rigger has just about vanished. But the schooner, the barkentine, and lesser varieties of the fore-and-aft rigged vessel are still doing a good business; indeed, says Mr. McFee, there are probably more ships of 40 or 50 tons under sail today than there were in the days of Francis Drake.

But the old square-rigger, of course, is a rare sight on modern seas; and Mr. McFee suspects that it was the very hardships of the life she offered to her people that make men lament her passing. Should the world suddenly run out of fuel, he remarks, so that its ocean commerce would have to depend again on the out-moded full-rigged ship, we would see a great outpouring of young men eager to sign on as seamen.

These men, he says, would come from everywhere—from gas stations and banks, from college lecture rooms and schoolteachers' desks, from chain stores and stockbrokers' officers; all that would be needed would be to pass the word "that men were wanted to man ships, not floating hotels or steam-driven warehouses, and the men would come in a hurry."

There is little doubt that Mr. McFee is entirely right, and the thing is a little perplexing. The old sailing ship life was absolutely certain to give its devotees one thing—a solid bump on the chin—with monotonous frequency.

It was a dog's life from start to finish, and it meant poor pay, long hours, bad food, hard work, and considerable risk of life and limb.

Why, then, should men want to have it restored?

The answer probably is that the ordinary human animal is a lot less interested in security, safety, and ease than he is usually supposed to be. He wants a life that will test and challenge him, something that will take him everlastingly over the bumps and show him whether he is rightfully a he-man with whiskers on his bosom.

If he can find such a life, he will leap to it—kicking like a steer about it, to be sure, but nevertheless leaping.

And the chief trouble with the years through which we have been passing is that they have offered youth neither a hard life nor an easy one. Their color has been a dead gray.

Man will take security thankfully if he can't have the challenge; it is when he can get neither that he finds himself in a bad way.

We probably can never restore to modern life the kind of raw-meat living the old wind-jammer represented. We have to devise an alternative; and youth's dissatisfaction today is simply a sign that we have not yet done so.

PLANS GO AHEAD FOR BIG BANQUET

'Jackson Day' Will Be Observed On Jan. 8 At Hotel Frances

Plans are being completed for the holding of the "Jackson Day" banquet at Hotel Frances at 7:30 p.m. on January 8, according to Albin P. Lassiter, president of the Young Democrats of Louisiana.

This event, held on the birthday of Andrew Jackson, will be arranged as the opening event locally of the campaign of President Roosevelt for reelection, and will be duplicated throughout the state by Young Democratic clubs and in other states by groups of Democrats who are devoted to the cause of the president.

The idea of holding these banquets originated with James A. Farley, chairman of the Democratic national committee, and it is being arranged so that an address by President Roosevelt will be broadcast and received by those attending the banquet here and elsewhere.

Mr. Lassiter expects that groups that he heads will hold banquets in the following Louisiana cities: Shreveport, New Orleans, Baton Rouge, Alexandria, Lake Charles, Lafayette and Opelousas as well as here in Monroe.

Many persons have already indicated their intention of attending the banquet at Hotel Frances and there will be an excellent program, Mr. Lassiter states, including an address by a good speaker whose name will be announced later.

JUNIOR LEAGUE WILL SPONSOR ANNUAL BALL

The "President's Birthday Ball," annually given on January 30, anniversary of President Roosevelt's birth, will be sponsored this year by the Junior Charity League of Monroe, it was announced by officers of the league Saturday.

The ball will be held on the Cherokee terrace roof garden of Hotel Frances. The major portion of the proceeds of the ball will be devoted to the baby clinic, one of the principal activities of the Junior League. The balance of the proceeds will go to the Warm Springs foundation, established by President Roosevelt for research in the treatment of infantile paralysis.

BIRTHS

BASTROP TO DEDICATE ITS NEW POSTOFFICE BUILDING SATURDAY

BASTROP, Jan. 4.—(Special)—Bastrop's new postoffice, which has been occupied for several weeks, will be formally dedicated on Saturday, January 11. Plans for the dedication were completed at a meeting of the committee appointed by the Kiwanis club several weeks ago to have charge of the dedication.

Congressman Riley J. Wilson will be one of the speakers and a representative of the postoffice department from Washington will also take part on the program. The Washington representative will probably be S. W. Purdum, fourth assistant postmaster general, or if he is unable to come, some other official will attend.

Following the dedication, the postoffice will hold open house to give the people of Bastrop and Morehouse parish an opportunity to inspect the federal building for the first time. J. D. McBride, acting Bastrop postmaster, will provide guides to take the people through the building and point out its many interesting features.

The dedication program will begin on Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock and a platform will be erected in front of the postoffice for the speakers. The street in front of the postoffice will be roped off from traffic during the dedication program.

The only other speaker on the program besides Congresman Wilson and the representative from the postoffice department at Washington will be Mayor J. R. Ludlum. Prior to the speaking there will be music.

Isaac Chapman, Bastrop newspaper man, will act as chairman and introduce the speakers.

UNION PARISH COTTON COMMITTEE ORGANIZED

MARION, La., Jan. 4.—(Special)—The Union parish cotton control committee, which has just been organized, is composed of the following: P. M. Turner, J. W. Brantley and Ed Carroll. O. S. Hightower has been elected alternate.

Following is a list of the local committeemen: Ward 1, J. W. Brantley, W. A. Smith and C. H. Albritton; alternate, M. E. Compton; ward 2, W. E. Booth, L. J. Jarmon and Murray Hudson. Alternate, K. D. POTATO GROWERS TO MEET IN CITY SOON

A meeting of Irish potato growers in Ouachita parish is slated for sometime during the week beginning January 13, according to an announcement made by E. R. Strahan, parish farm agent. The meeting will be held in the courthouse.

The purpose of the session, Mr. Strahan explained, is to explain the AAA potato adjustment project and to elect committeemen who will assist and cooperate with producers in filling in applications for tax exemption stamps in connection with the federal potato growing program.

Pending the meeting Mr. Strahan urges all growers of Irish potatoes in the parish who contemplate planting, to prepare written records of potato production for 1932-35 inclusive, showing acreage planted each year, bushels harvested and bushels sold. The records will greatly assist in making the proposed applications, Mr. Strahan said.

REV. THOMPSON WILL DIRECT CHOIR TODAY

Rev. O. J. Thompson of Shreveport will be the guest and choir director at both morning and evening services at the First Baptist church in West Monroe today.

Rev. Thompson received his training for educational director at the Baptist Bible institute in New Orleans and also underwent training for four years in New York City where he acted as musical director for the Calvary Baptist church there.

Services at which Rev. Thompson will direct the choir are at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m., today.

Ford

ANNOUNCES $25-A-MONTH TIME PAYMENTS AND A NEW UCC 6% FINANCE PLAN

Any New Ford V-8 Car Can Now Be Purchased for $25 a Month with Usual Low Down-Payment

This $25-a-month time-payment plan enables you to buy a New Ford V-8 car through your Ford dealer on new low monthly terms.

After the usual low down-payment is made, $25 a month is all you have to pay for any type of new car, including insurance and financing.

Your cost for this extension of credit is only one-half of 1 per cent a month on your original unpaid balance and insurance. This plan reduces financing charges for twelve months to 6 per cent. For example, if you owe a balance of $400 for your car and insurance, you pay $24 for the year of credit; if the balance is $200 you pay $12. Your credit cost for one year is the original unpaid balance multiplied by 6 per cent.

UCC plans provide you with insurance protection at regular conference rates. You have not only fire and theft insurance, but $50 deductible collision, and protection against other accidental physical damage to your car.

The Universal Credit Company has made these plans available through all Ford dealers in the United States.

ample time to nominate them in September, as was formerly the practice.

"But struck, as it thought, with the political wisdom of forcing the candidates for congress and the United States senate to go before the people at the same time as the state candidates presented themselves, the state machine compelled its spineless legislature to put through a law to that effect. Its idea was to force a line-up fight; and it did, but the lineup was against the machine and not for it.

"The congress of the United States is properly interested in the fair and honest election of its senators and representatives. And, quite naturally, a congressional primary cannot be disassociated from a state primary when the date is the same, the ballots are the same, the commissioners are the same and the same oppressive laws and iniquitous machine practices apply to both.

"Having laid a trap for its political enemies and fallen into it themselves, the machine leaders and candidates are raising a mighty howl against conditions of its of creating. They are purple with indignation over the undeniable fact that the congress of the United States has accepted their invitation to manifest an interest in the fairness and honesty of the Louisiana state primary. Their hope that they would be able to pull off a gigantic election steal in Louisiana on January 21, without interference from anyone, and without serious consequences to themselves, has been blasted. Therefore, they are trying to impress the people of Louisiana with the idea that local rights and prerogatives are being invaded and that the machine should be left unmolested to stuff ballot boxes and falsify election counts at will.

"But, the voters of Louisiana are not fooled by the tactics or expressions of the gang of plunderers that is seeking to fasten its tentacles on the people and draw more precious blood from the public veins. The steady progress of the Home Rule campaign, the manifestations of enthusiastic approval of the candidacies of Cleveland Dear and his associates given in many parts of the state during the past week, indicate a moral and civic awakening in Louisiana which all the Bob Maestris and Earl Longs and 'Oil' K. Allens in the world cannot weaken. The state machine spielers may cry 'wolf' until their lungs are weary. They will not frighten or coerce the honest and independent Democratic voters of this state into renewing a public trust which the state regime so shamefully and unblushingly betrayed.

"The Home Rule movement is growing by leaps and bounds. And that is precisely what is the matter with "Bob" Maestri and his hoodle gang The star of their power in Louisiana is setting. The handwriting on the wall is too plain for even the Maestri-picked candidates to ignore."

DOG'S FAMILY TREE USEFUL

Police of Prague, Czechoslovakia, have arrested a man who, disguised as an impoverished aristocrat, begged from passers by and displayed a family tree. The document was officially stamped and sealed, and bore such details as "grandmother, Elsa von Freudenfels; great-grandmother, Edith von Freudenfels; great-grandfather, Dagobert von Blasienburg." When the police investigated they found that this was the pedigree of a prize dog.

into his automobile, "Want to go somewhere for a drink, baby?" was the invitation formula. In the morning the unfortunate girl was found in the man's car in a garage dead, horribly mistreated and beaten to death. The excuse for mentioning so dreadful a crime is that it ought to warn all girls foolish enough to accept invitations from unknown men.

ENGLAND LEARNS with agitation that individuals on the continent are engaged in a regular traffic in English babies, bought from baby farms, at a low price and taken abroad. Sometimes the infants are adopted and then rejected, the "owners" getting tired of them, sometimes, the British report says "they are adopted for shameful purposes."

In the middle ages there was important European traffic in young girls for Turkish harems, flaxen-haired girls from Germany were worth particularly high prices. The traffic in helpless young children seems even worse than that. In such trafficking the Pied Piper of Hamelin legend is supposed to have originated.

CHILDREN WILL LEARN with pleasure that it is not necessary to eat spinach unless you like it. Other vegetables take the place of spinach with a menacing person called "Pop-Eye."

The government, through WPA, will print a book on what to eat and how to eat it. One well-known New York physician, ventures the opinion that spinach contains an objectionable amount of "vegetable uric acid."

WEST MONROE HAS SMALL FIRE LOSS

Fire losses in West Monroe for the year of 1935 were held down to a small figure, according to the annual report of Earl Taylor, fire chief, who gave the figures as $6,489.71. The total fire loss for 1934 was $3,435.

During 1935, there were 71 runs made by the fire department which laid 5,160 feet of hose and used 168 feet of ladder.

The fires that occurred were designated as follows: Automobile fires, 5; grass fires, 18; residence fires, 18; business establishment fires, 1; barn fires, 1; false alarms, 3; hotel fires, 1; filling station fires, 3; train wreck fires, 2; miscellaneous fires, 19, or a total of 71.

A total of 53 hours was spent in the fighting of fires, the chief reported.

Value of the buildings where the fires occurred was given as $24,255, and the insurance coverage totalled $12,950. Contents of buildings where the fires occurred had a total value of $19,200, and with $5,000 insurance coverage. Loss on buildings was $4,077.06 and on contents, $2,412.65, the report states.

When sorrow drives us out of our quiet gardens in to the open highway, we must accept it gallantly.

My Rendezvous with Life

by MARY PICKFORD

In this, the concluding article of a series of six, Miss Pickford sounds a call for a full cultivation of self and a gallant facing of life.

CHAPTER VI

Only certain centers are now working in the average man; others are dormant. In a perfect human being all the centers will function fully and will produce perfect mental unfoldment and a perfect physical body. I believe the man called Jesus was like that. He was a perfect man, a master who knew the power of thought. Because He knew the truth about all things, He had dominion over all things. When others spoke of death, He spoke of life. He was a pattern for us to model ourselves after. "Alone in all history He estimates the greatness of man," Emerson said of Him. "One man was true to what is in me and you. He saw that God incarnates Himself in man, and evermore goes forth anew to take possession of the world."

Do you wonder what certain centers in ourselves are not functioning fully? Well, here is an example. The history of the human race goes back many thousand years. But it is only in the last few thousand years that we have begun to perceive color. At first man knew only black and white. Then red. And finally, by slow development, he saw the primary colors and their combinations. Yet even now a large percentage of people are color blind. And there are myriads of more glorious colors all around us that even the most sensitive human eye can't detect.

Think of how many make no response to music. They are what is known as "tone-deaf." They hear sounds, of course. Yet they listen to great, inspiring symphonies without the slightest reaction. Music is a closed book to them. And so we know that certain centers in those men have not yet been aroused.

All great musical artists are striving to achieve pure tone and to elevate man's thoughts by its sheer beauty. The radio is doing much to educate young people to an appreciation and understanding of music and this may one day prove of priceless worth to mankind. Harmony is a powerful force for good.

When Mama and Jack went away one of my most agonizing thoughts was whether we should ever meet again. And if we did, would we know each other? At this moment I have no positive proof that we will. By that I mean I can't show any of my five senses this will be so. But by a higher sense, the power of intuition, I am sure that nothing can ever cut a tie of pure unselfed love. Love is God. And so long as you love anyone, you are bound by God to that person, whether he has gone on to another life or not.

God is not cruel. He would not let us down. He would not let us build a beautiful comradeship with some one only to tear us apart forever. Sometimes there must be separations, which are necessary for our growth. In this life we face them when we send our children away to school—or when we release them to set out on their own careers.

Death is just another such separation; and one that I truly believe will end in reunion. God arranged my meeting with Mother and Jack to my satisfaction in this life. And so why shouldn't I believe He will do it as happily in the next? He has given the lower animals a sixth sense called "the homing instinct." A dog will travel hundreds of miles to find the master he loves. And so why shouldn't a man, who is the highest manifestation of God's thought, be drawn intuitively to his loved ones when they meet again on other planes?

These are the things that sorrow has taught me. And now that I am acquainted with grief, I have even learned that it has its virtues. Since it is an experience we all share, it becomes one of the greatest of all human bonds, one that makes us kinder to others who suffer. You see, men misunderstand each other so often because they seldom feel the same emotions at the same time; but when they feel a similar emotion simultaneously, then and then only are they bound to understand each other.

Somewhere I have read that "Happy lives are little lives. They do not live beyond their rose-wreathed walls." And so, when sorrow drives us out of our quiet gardens into the open highway, we must accept it gallantly. For along the road to understanding we will find inspiring new scenes; and even when we are traveling through the dark valley, we shall be able to see the shining mountain tops ahead.

A message that brought me the greatest comfort in my dark hours is called "The Ship." I do not know the name of the author. But though it has freqeuntly been quoted, I should like to repeat it. It says:

"I am standing upon the seashore. A ship at my side spreads her white sails to the morning breeze and starts for the blue lagoon.

"She is an object of beauty and strength and I stand and watch her until, at length, she is only a ribbon of white cloud just where the sea and sky come to mingle with each other.

"Then someone at my side says, 'There! She is gone!' Gone where? Gone from my sight—that is all.

"She is just as large in mast and hull as when she left my side and just as able to bear her load of living freight to the place of destination.

"Her diminished size is in me, not in her, and just at the moment when someone at my side says, 'There! She is gone!' there are other voices glad to take up the shout, 'There! She comes!'" wide attention, now is attempting to justify them as reprisals against alleged acts of cruelty, stated to have been committed by Ethiopians.

"These allegations form part of a campaign of disparagement and abuse launched against Ethiopia by means of fabricated publications and faked photographs.

"This campaign is now being resumed with a view to misleading public opinion over the responsibility for odious crimes—the bombing by airplanes of hospitals and ambulances—of which there recently have been many examples.

"The Italian government is now endeavoring to prepare world opinion for the more intensive use which it is about to make of means of warfare prohibited by international conventions.

"The Italian press, which is under government control, announces the opening of a new phase during which no rules are any longer to be observed; even more callous methods are to be brought into play against the Ethiopian people."

den "feint" movements in the vicinity of the house, they finally swept through the front gates at a dizzy pace.

A Christmas tree twinkled in the hallway for a belated Yule celebration by three-year-old Jon.

The tousle-haired youngster, clinging to his father's neck as he entered the house, clapped his hands at the sight of the tree. Lindbergh hurried inside with Mrs. Lindbergh and Jon. They were accompanied by Aubrey Niel Morgan, brother-in-law of Mrs. Lindbergh.

Ten bicycle police patrolled the road in front of the house while others were posted around the home.

The Lindberghs arrived in Cardiff, of which Llandaff is a suburb, early in the afternoon. The party lunched inconspicuously at a local hotel.

Construction is proceeding rapidly on a large airport at Prague, Czechoslovakia, which, when completed will cost approximately $4,400,000.

that has given such astounding results in the most agonizing cases of rheumatism, neuritis, stomach, liver, kidney, bowel and blood troubles—as this new Gly-Cas. Is it any wonder this new remedy has become so well known in the short time it has been introduced to local sufferers.

Read what Mr. M. Vallery, R. F. D. No. 2, Box No. 232, Monroe, well known local railroad man who has lived here for the past ten years, said recently in lauding the action of this new remedy to the Gly-Cas man who is daily meeting crowds of local people at the Phoenix Drug company, 348 DeSiard street, this city:

"It is a pleasure to be the means of others learning of Gly-Cas that they too may regain their health as I have," said Mr. Vallery, "Even though I had always been very careful of my diet practically all foods I ate caused pains in my stomach. Gases formed so badly that my heart would palpitate, dizzy attacks were awful. I was continually taking soda to get relief but often that failed in my stubborn case. For years I had been troubled with constipation and I realized my entire system was filled with poisons. Regardless of the number or kinds of medicines I tried—none could help me. My kidneys caused back pains, headached continually and was always tired and worn-out, had little energy to do my work. I was in a miserable condition and as nothing could help me I became worried about my future—I did not want to finish life in suffering. But a short trial of Gly-Cas soon changed all of that."

"Gly-Cas was not only surprising with its results in my case alone for I know many others that have received the same remarkable benefit I have," continued Mr. Vallery, "I soon noticed a great change in my condition, bowels were regulated almost at once, the poisons and gases were removed from my system and soon I began to enjoy my foods without any ill effects following my meals. My former energy is restored, get perfect sleep and feel so good I am ready for my day's work every morning. It is wonderful that sufferers can get such a medicine as this new Gly-Cas."

Gly-Cas is sold by Phoenix Drug company, 348 DeSiard street, Monroe, and by leading druggists in surrounding towns.

POPE'S TICKET EXHIBITED

One of the most treasured relics of King Gustav of Sweden has been exhibited in Stockholm. It is the return half of the Venice-Rome round trip ticket used by Pope Pius X when he journeyed to Rome for the Papal election. Believing he would not be made Pope he bought a return ticket. When King Gustav paid him a visit after his electon the pope presented the ticket to him. "I shall not need it now," he said.

The speed of a plane is usually less than that of the propeller slip stream.

Jonesville

Clarence Richard, who is employed by the government at Waterproof, spent the week end with his wife and mother.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Simpson are visiting relatives in Winnfield.

Reverend Jerome Cain, pastor of the local Methodist church, returned to his duties here after spending the past week-end with friends and relatives in Bunkie.

Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Girod and children visited in Columbia.

Mrs. Callie Wiley has been in Ferriday nursing at the Ferriday hospital.

Emile Enete and Frank Hotard visited with their parents. They are members of the CCC camp at Harrisonburg.

Mr. and Mrs. Mortimer Cotton and son, were week-end visitors in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Lazarus.

Mr. and Mrs. John Griffey and son returned to their home in New Orleans, after spending a few days with Mr. Griffey's mother and father.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Redell of Anahauc, Texas, were guests in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Phillips.

Mr. and Mrs. John Davis, who for the past several years have lived at Mangham, have moved to Jonesville, and will make this their home.

Miss Kitty Vogt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Vogt of Ferriday was a visitor in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Owen over the week-end.

These simple steps can help your family have FEWER COLDS—SHORTER COLDS

1. To help build RESISTANCE to Colds—Live normally—avoid excesses. Eat simple food and keep elimination regular. Drink plenty of water. Take some exercise daily—outdoors preferably. Get plenty of rest and sleep. (During the colds season, gargle night and morning with Vicks Voratone Antiseptic, especially designed for safe daily use to aid in defense against infection which may enter through the mouth.)

2. To help PREVENT Many Colds—At the first warning nasal irritation, sniffle or sneeze, use Vicks Va-tro-nol—just a few drops up each nostril. Va-tro-nol is especially designed for the nose and upper throat—where most colds start. Used in time, Va-tro-nol helps to prevent many colds—and to throw off head colds in the early stages.

3. To help END a Cold Sooner If a cold has developed, or strikes without warning, rub throat and chest at bedtime with Vicks VapoRub. VapoRub acts two ways at once: (1) By stimulation through the skin, like a poultice or plaster; (2) By inhalation of its penetrating medicated vapors, direct to inflamed air-passages. Through the night, this combined vapor-poultice action loosens phlegm, soothes irritation, helps break congestion.

These three steps form the basis of Vicks Plan for Better Control of Colds—a practical home guide to fewer and shorter colds. Developed by Vicks Chemists and Medical Consultants; tested in extensive clinics by practicing physicians; further proved in everyday home use by millions. Full description of the Plan in each Vicks package—or write for details of Plan and trial samples of Vick Colds-Control Aids. Address: Vicks, 128 Milton Street, Greensboro, N. C.

BROWN PLAYS TECH, A. A. U. CHAMPS THIS WEEK

TWO-GAME SERIES WITH M'PHERSON OPENS WEDNESDAY

Two All-America Players On Globe Refiners Cage Quintet

Following their invasion of Mississippi last week-end, the Brown Paper mill Safety Firsts play three games at home this week, the first with the Louisiana Tech Bulldogs Monday night and the next two with the strong Globe Refiners of McPherson, Kansas, Wednesday and Thursday nights.

BALDWYN 24, BROWN 23

BALDWYN, Miss., Jan. 4.—(Special)—The Baldwyn Independents and the Brown Paper mill quintet of Monroe put on another rousing battle here tonight, with Baldwyn winning, 24 to 23. The locals scored a two-point victory last night in an overtime battle.

Baldwyn again staged a thrilling rally to overcome an early Brown lead. Several apparently impossible shots were made by the local club to give them their narrow victory.

The Tech quintet hasn't reached their peak yet this season, due to lack of practice, and the Brownies may not be hard pressed to take the Bulldogs' measure, but it will be something else again when the Refiners take the floor at Brown gym.

The McPherson club won the Missouri Valley A. A. U. championship last season and then went on to Denver, where they were runners-up in the national A. A. U. tournament. The national title, incidentally, was won by the Santa Fe Trails of Kansas City, a member of the Missouri Valley league which lost to the Refiners in the league race.

The fastest basketball in the country is played by Missouri Valley league and the Brownies will be facing the best of that circuit. Local fans got a look at that brand of ball two years ago when the Wichita Henrys, then national A. A. U. champions, and the Hutchinson Renos played here.

The Globe team, which is said to be the tallest basketball aggregation in the world, is a favorite to cop the national title, which they lost by a narrow decision last season. Coached by Gene Johnson, head cage mentor at Wichita university for five seasons and then coach of the Henrys, the club includes two all-America players and one former all-American.

Their all-American center, Joe Fortenberry, is six feet, eight inches tall and is termed the outstanding center in the game today. He can outjump them all, is a great defensive man and very fast. At forward, the Refiners have Francis Johnson, also selected on last year's first all-America team. He not only is a great shot but is said to be the finest "bulldogger" in the business. He was high scorer of the Missouri Valley league last season and was high forward in the national tournament at Denver. He formerly starred at Wichita university, being named on the all-Kansas team his last two years in college.

Werner Franks, a guard, joined the Refiners this season, coming from the Lifschultz Freighters of Chicago. He won all-America honors two years ago as a member of the crack Chicago aggregation. He also is a fine shot and his dribbling is outstanding.

Vernon Vaughn is the other starting forward. He captained the championship Wichita university quintet in 1933, his third year as a member of that squad. He is six feet, five inches tall. The other starting guard is Bill Wheatley, six feet, four inches tall, who is said to be the hardest playing guard in the game. He was touted as the greatest defensive player in the Missouri Valley circuit last year, Jack Ragland, another all-Kansas guard from Wichita, is rated the equal of Franks and Wheatley, and is used to alternate with the other two regular starters.

Other members of the squad are Harry Dowd, forward, who reaches six feet, six inches in height; Lee Gibbons, another forward who is six feet, two; and Delbert Petre, guard, the smallest man on the team. This "midget" is five feet, 10 inches tall.

Just how the Brownies will fare with this troupe of all-stars is problematical. The Safety Firsts got off to a slower start than usual this season, due to lack of early practice, and just when they started to click, Gene Francis, stellar forward, was lost through illness. However, Francis rejoined the team last Tuesday night when the Brownies beat the fast-stepping Texas A. and M. team and he also made the trip to Baldwyn. He should be back in form by Wednesday night and Manager Cary Phillips hopes to give the invaders a real fight.

All three games this week will be played at Brown gym, starting at 7:45 o'clock.

RENICK ON DISCOVERY

ARCADIA, Calif., Jan. 4.—(AP)—The jockey who'll be riding the great Discovery in the rich Santa Anita handicap, Feb. 22, will be Sammy Renick, who has just signed a new contract with Owner Alfred Vanderbilt, Renick is on his way here to work out the horse.

Northeast Center's First Boxing Team To Report Monday

SPORTS Chatter

BY GEO. V. LOFTON

AS WE SEE IT—

Every year at this time the big bugs of business come out of their shells and tell you what to expect of industry during the twelve months to come. The politicians who are holding office at the time predict great things under their guidance, while the "outs" want you to know that prosperity in abundance will descend upon the land if they are entrusted to shape the destinies of the nation.

In other words, the first of the year is the time for predictions, as well a resolutions. And it's just about as easy to make a prediction stick as it is to keep a resolution.

We don't know the names of the clairvoyants these big shots consult, so we're just going to make our guesses without benefit of astral assistance. Here goes:

The Red Sox will win the American league pennant. The Tigers will have to be content with runner-up honors, with the Yankees third. The Indians will be just as big a disappointment as they were under Walter Johnson. Lou Gehrig's string of consecutive games will be broken in July.

The Cardinals will come down to the wire in front in the National league, with the Giants in the second slot and the Cubs third. The Cards will then lose the World Series to Mister Cronin's high priced hirelings.

Joe Louis will knock out Schmeling in June and then follow it up by polishing off Jim Braddock the same way. Braddock will last longer than Schmeling but he'll get it just the same. Tony Canzoneri will lose his lightweight championship and Jock McAvoy, the English phenom, will depose John Henry Lewis.

Lawson Little will win both the British and United States amateur golf championships for the third consecutive time. (Brother, that's really climbing out on a limb.)

The British will win the Davis Cup finals again, with Fred Perry again the world's No. 1 tennis player. The United States team will be stronger but not strong enough.

The United States will win the Olympic track and field championship at Berlin. Yep, the U. S. will compete despite the current agitation against participation. A free trip to Berlin will be too much for the badge wearers of the Olympic committee to turn down.

Gazing far into the future, we see Alabama as the next champion of the Southeastern conference, with Vanderbilt and L. S. U. being the chief contender. Louisiana State's losses by graduation will pull the Tigers down just a notch or so. Tulane's new head coach won't be much more successful, if any, than Ted Cox. Both Southern Methodist and Texas Christian will be toppled in the Southwest conference. Each loses too many stars to come up with a championship team next fall.

Minnesota will go undefeated for the third consecutive season and Princeton will again be the chief football power in the east.

And Christmas will come on the 25th of December. At least we can't go wrong on that one.

SOFTBALL NOTES

Apparently encouraged by the bright sunshine of the past couple of days, the boys are beginning to talk baseball and softball again. This iten concerns softball.

It seems the boys yearn for action. They don't want to start playing yet but they do want something done about the two leagues which probably will be sponsored here this season. Why wait, they ask. Let's start organizing our teams now and then we'll be all set when the season rolls around.

The point is well taken. There's no use in waiting until April or May to start forming the clubs which will compete in the two leagues this year.

Last year the Y's Men's club sponsored one league and the Recreation department the other. One league was well regulated while the other rocked along as best it could with a set of rules which were constantly changed during the season.

A majority of softball players believes that two leagues should be operated this season. One would be "wide open" and the other would have an age limit that would give the older men a chance. After all, a well rounded recreational program should give the older fellows a chance and an "old men's" league would allow men to compete who ordinarily would not have a chance against the younger element.

The softball program should be laid down in January or February. It isn't too early to start right now.

THOSE FOOTBALL DRUNKS

After listening to the football coaches deplore whiskey-drinking in the stands at their football games, Mr. Paul Gallico, the gent who writes very entertainingly for the New York Daily News, the Chicago Tribune and other papers which subscribe to the Tribune service, penned a neat little piece in reply. He hints that possibly the athletic authorities are just a wee bit to blame. The coaches, of course, would never dream that maybe they could do something to help the customers.

A part of Mr. Gallico's piece follows:

"The coaches did a good job with their deploring. They deplored not only the actions of the famous twelfth man, but also the attitude of the press, the members of which laughed raucously and made cracks. The coaches felt that if the press were less inclined to make light of these football drunks, it would be a better thing for the country.

"My conscience tell me that I have sinned greatly in this respect, and I feel that the shoe fits. I once devoted a whole article to a drunk in the Yale Bowl who was going to jump over the goal posts when the coppers collared him. I was enchanted by the Jersey counterman who went down to help Dartmouth.

"I feel particularly upset about the way the coaches feel because I so often get drunk at football games myself. I do not mean to do this, because I am really a very temperate person and I am always sorry the next day, especially when I read my story.

"I do not drink on warm days or when it is dry, and I do not think so many other people do either. For instance, I do not recall seeing any drunks at the Southern Methodist-Texas Christian game at Fort Worth, where the weather was balmy and a bright sun shone throughout the game.

"I maintain that all of the drinking at football games here in the east and in the middle west is purely medicinal (as in my own case).

"The colleges think nothing of inconveniencing 80,000 persons who have paid from $2.20 to $4.40 to see a football game by making them sit in uncovered stands in rain and snow storms because they do not care to postpone football games. If the professionals can play on Sunday, I am sure the amateurs can, too.

"It has always seemed to me that the attitude of the universities, particularly on big games, that are sold out a week in advance, is that the dough is in the till—to hell with the public. Go ahead and play the game.

"The only redress the public has is to get stiff in self-protection and tear down the goal posts. I have been hoping all these years to see a football crowd, after sitting through a cold downpour for two and a half hours, get stiff enough trying to keep warm, to tear the university down with the goal posts. Then, maybe the boys would do something about giving the public a break."

We wish Mr. Gallico would accept an invitation to cover a football game on a night in November from an open press box. He'd probably get so

SEVERAL FORMER PREP STARS ON INDIANS' SQUAD

Malone's Team To Open Season Against Arkansas Tech Jan. 31

Northeast Center of L. S. U.'s first boxing squad will report to Coach Jim Malone Monday for their initial group workout in preparation for the 1936 schedule.

Malone, a former member of the L. S. U. boxing team under Capt. Francis Brink, expects a squad of about 30 mittmen to report. Several of his boxers have been working out individually but the first squad drill will be held Monday, Coach Malone said yesterday.

Coach Malone has several experienced boxers around which to build his Indian squad and he hopes to present a representative aggregation of fighters. Although the boxing team isn't expected to enjoy the success of the 1935 football squad, Malone is confident that several members of his mitt team will be able to give the opposition plenty of fight.

The men who will form the nucleus of the 1936 squad are "Bump" Gormley, 122 pounds; Sammy Bono, who will campaign as a light heavyweight; Jack Beckett, 135 pounder; "Red" Reynolds, 145; "Squatty" Young, the Bastrop heavyweight; "Bully" Whit, another heavyweight; and Tommy Nicholson, who weighs around 120 pounds.

Gormley hails from Lake Charles. He was a high school star for three years and is expected to be a big winner for the Indians.

Sammy Bono needs no introduction to Monroe fans. He is another Lake Charles star who was one of the finest high school scrappers in the state for several years. He fought here in a couple of matches against the Neville team and is a former high school champion.

Frank Bono, Sammy's brother, who also won fame as a high school scrapper, will not be able to compete as a member of the Northeast Center squad because of a football injury. Frank's hand and arm are both in bad shape and Coach Malone said he would not be available for the boxing team.

Beckett has had considerable experience in amateur ranks in Shreveport. He fought as a member of the A. A. U. club there and is expected to be a winner for the Indians. Reynolds also had boxing experience in his home town of Beaumont, Texas, and is in good shape to start his collegiate career. Malone said he had been working out at Beaumont during the holidays and the Indian mentor expects "Red" to report in top form. He was a member of the Beaumont high school squad for three years.

White has had no previous boxing experience but the form he has shown in early workouts leads Malone to believe that he will be a valuable addition to the squad. Nicholson is a former Neville high school star who campaigned successfully in north Louisiana and state boxing tournaments during his prep school days.

Other promising mitt material is expected to be uncovered from the squad which will report Monday.

The Northeast Center schedule has not been completed, but the Indians will open their campaign with a match at Russellville, Ark., on Jan. 31 against the strong Arkansas Tech aggregation.

Coach Malone had scheduled a match with Ole Miss for December 13, but the Mississippians got a bid to the Orange Bowl football classic and thus forced to postpone the boxing match, as the squad is built around several football players.

Coach Malone hopes to complete the Indian schedule within the next couple of weeks. He is attempting to schedule matches with Louisiana Tech and Centenary, both of which will sponsor boxing teams this season.

Coach Malone has announced that Northeast Center will not sponsor a basketball team this season, with the Indian athletes concentrating on boxing instead.

A. A. U. STARS PLAY TWO-GAME SERIES WITH BROWN

HINES LEADS IN RIVERSIDE OPEN

Long Island Pro Posts Sizzling 66 To Top Field With 136

RIVERSIDE, Calif., Jan. 4.—(AP)—Jimmy Hines, hefty young eastern pro, blasted the favorites into the background today in the Riverside $3,000 open with a sizzling 66, six under par.

Jumping into the lead in the second round of play, the Garden City, Long Islander, finished 36 holes with 136. His 70 yesterday was two under par.

Three strokes to the rear was Orville White, of St. Louis, with 139. Byron Nelson, Ridgewood, N. J., in third place had 141.

John Geerssen, Ogden, Utah, added a 73 with a first round 69 for 142. Four erstwhile leaders, Ky Laffoon, Chicago, Vic Ghezzi, Deal, N. J., Harold McSpaden, unattached, and Jimmy Thomson, Ridgewood, had to be content with 143s.

Sam Parks, Jr., national open king from Pittsburgh, continued his par performance, posting a 72-72—144, and tied with him in the bracket were Henry Picard, Hershey, Pa., and Johnny Dawson, Chicago amateur.

Sixty low scorers who shot 153 and under go into the 36-hole finals tomorrow over the Victoria club course.

Hines stroked both nines in 33, picking up two birdies going out and four on the journey home. The fast, rolling greens treated him better than the rest, and he sank long putts, one for 20 feet. He missed a six-footer for a birdie on the third, however, and another at eight feet on the fifth.

Walter Hagen, after returning to par form yesterday, needed 79 to get around today, and landed in the 149s with Horton Smith, Chicago; Willie Goggin, San Francisco; Marshall Becker, Topeka, and Arch Hambrick, Zanesville, Ohio, pro.

COOMBS IMPROVES AFTER GUN INJURY

PALESTINE, Texas, Jan. 4.—(AP)—John W. Coombs, Duke university baseball coach and former "iron man" of the Philadelphia Athletics, was resting well today. Coombs lost a finger when a shotgun exploded near here Thursday while he was hunting quail.

Yawkey Enlarges Red Sox Park For His New Stars

Increased Attendance Seen At Boston; Braves May Sell Berger

By Eddie Brietz

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Around the hot stove league: Getting ready for the arrival in Beantown of Jimmy Foxx, Roger Cramer, Eric McNair, et al, Tom Yawkey is enlarging Fenway park. . . . Four thousand additional seats will increase the capacity of the grandstand to 25,000. . . . Which Messrs. Foxx, Grove and friends will be expected to fill.

The Giants send out contracts next week. . . . Casey Stengel is satisfied with his pitching staff now that Ed Brandt is a Dodger. . . . The Braves soon may announce a deal involving Wally Berger, one of the best outfielders in the National league. . . . Tom Yawkey will go into a salary huddle with Foxx and Lefty Grove in Philly next week. . . . Foxx says he will raise his ante because of the impending visit of the stork.

There is a move to open the big league season with intersectional series. . . . Presidents Will Harridge and Ford Frick will confer on the subject. . . . The Cubs will be the champ bainstormers this year. . . . Their exhibition schedule covers 7,200 miles, including a hop from California to Florida. . . . The team will play in 20 cities in eight states and the trip will cost between $500 and $600 per man.

The Reds already have sold 5,000 seats for their 1936 opener in Cincinnati. . . . Rhineland fans always make a festival out of opening day. . . . Rochester has sold Homer Peel, ex-Giant, to Fort Worth. . . . Pie Traynor says Red Lucas will stay with the Pirates this season. . . . Kiki Cuyler turned down a West Point appointment to take up baseball as a career.

Not only can Mike Ryba, the Cardinals' one-man ball team, play every position, but he can manage as well. . . . In 1934 he served a spell as player-manager of the Springfield, Mo., team. . . . Les Scarsella, Cincinnati's rookie first sacker, works in a dynamite factory during the off season. . . . Bill Atwood, the new Philly catcher, was a three letter man at Simmons university. . . . It will suit Jimmy Wilson all right if he is a .300 man for the Phils.

Perhaps the most distinguished footballer among the 1936 rookies is Clarence Anderson of Montclair, N. J., who goes south with the Giants. . . . He played three years at Colgate, was co-captain in his senior year and in his three years on the team, not an opposing player crossed the Colgate goal when he was in the game. . . . In 1932, when the Raiders were unbeaten and untied, Anderson was in every game as an alternate halfback.

Frank O'Rourke is slated to manage the Wilkes Barre club in the New York-Penn league. . . . Schoolboy Rowe and Lon Warneke, world's series rivals, went hunting together recently. . . . Umpire Charlie Moran's heart may cause his retirement in a year or so. . . . St. Louis had Phil Weintraub ticketed for Rochester, but Atlanta offered $6,000 for him and indicated it might go higher.

HAAS TIES PRO IN ORLEANS TOURNEY

Freddie Shoots Par Golf To Pull Even With Penfold With 149

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 4.—(AP)—Fred Haas, Jr., local amateur, shooting par golf, today pulled up on even terms with Ernest Penfold, Minneapolis professional, with 149 for a two-round total in the 54-hole New Orleans open golf championship.

Joe Burch of Mobile held third place with 155, dropping from the second place position which he held with 75 at the end of the first round. He scored 80 today.

Haas put together a perfect 72 after making 77 on his initial round. Penfold who tallied a 74 yesterday needed 75 in his initial second round today.

Back of Burch with 158 were Jimmy McGonagill, Dallas amateur, and Eric Bannister, Canadian professional, each with identical rounds, 81-77—158.

Johnny Camet, of Baton Rouge, in fourth place with a 78 yesterday, took 81 today and fell into sixth place. Fred Haas, Sr., Colonial Country club professional, added a second round 78 to yesterday's 82 for 160 and seventh position.

Haas, Jr., Penfold and Burch will tee of in a three-some at 1:15 p. m. tomorrow. Another threesome will be McGonagill, Bannister and Camet.

TECH FIVE OPENS CONFERENCE RACE AGAINST MILLSAPS

Bulldogs Play Brown Here Monday; Squad Slow In Reaching Form

RUSTON, La., Jan. 4.—(Special)—Lack of practice on the part of the Louisiana Tech varsity basketball squad as a co-working unit may give the local cagers a slow start on their 1936 intercollegiate schedule.

That was the opinion of Coach Eddie McLane Saturday afternoon as he turned loose his tutoring for the second day, in preparation for the Techmen's important conference opener with the Millsaps Majors at Ruston next Friday night.

The Canine cagemen on Monday night at Monroe will tune up their machinery in a game with the Brown Paper mill quintet, which will be Tech's first test of the year.

A prolonged football season, which ended with a game at the University of Tampa on December 14, and an unusually long Christmas vacation at Tech have caused a delay in beginning the basketball business here. Not until Friday of this week did drill begin on a concentrated and unified basis.

Mostly fundamental rehearsing has been occupying the attention of Coach McLane and his basketeers the past two days, during which 13 men have been reporting.

The end of football, besides giving Coach McLane a chance to think about basketball, released three varsity lettermen for cage service. They include Madison Brooks, Rinehart, center; Billy Mitchell, Ruston, forward, and Will Cotten, Oak Grove, guard.

The only other letterman of last year, now in basketball togs, is Allen Barham of Oak Ridge a forward.

Of the four lettermen, Brooks, Cotten and Barham are seniors, and Mitchell is a junior.

The squad of 13 includes two other juniors, namely, R. G. Hart of Sterlington, guard, and Leon Kyle, Marion, center.

Seven sophomores on the Tech roster are Fred Miller, Waterproof, guard; Charles McCartney, Urania, forward; William Wenner, Swartz, guard; C. R. Blair, Sicily Island, forward; S. X. Lewis, Minden, guard; James Maze, Shreveport, guard, and P. T. Smith, Lillie, center. Smith, however, will not be eligible for playing until after the end of the present semester.

Homer Cody, a member of the Tech basketball team last year, is being kept out of the cage sport because of an injury received in football. He is expected to be able to join the cage squad within the next month.

After trying their wares on the Brown Paper Millers at Monroe Monday night, the Techsters will do all they can to cope with the Millsaps situation which will arise Friday night. The locals boys well remember Millsaps from last year, when in a semi-final battle of the S. I. A. A. meet at Jackson, Miss., the Majors nosed out Tech by two points in an overtime game. Incidentally, it was the football team of Millsaps college the past season that beat the Techmen 21-20, which was the locals' only defeat of the fall.

Following the Millsaps engagement on Friday, the Technicians will meet the Mississippi college five at Ruston on Saturday.

SARAZEN TAKES LEAD AT MIAMI

Veteran Posts Sub-Par 36 To Top Runyan By Single Stroke

MIAMI SPRINGS, Fla., Jan. 4.—(AP)—Gene Sarazen, the man the rest of the field worries about in most any old golf tournament—no matter how far behind he be—was on top tonight after 36 holes of the $2,500 Miami open.

Sarazen of Brookfield Center, Conn., back in the ruck with 72 yesterday and starting raggedly today, found suddenly the magic touch that has won him every major links title and sizzled through the back nine in 31. He came home with 66, four under par, to lead at 138 for the first two rounds.

He was up there tonight, cockey and confident where short days ago he was wondering whether his good days were [illegible] and odds-makers gave him [illegible] an even chance of winning [illegible] 12-year-old local classic he took four straight years, 1929 through 1932.

One stroke back, at 139, were yesterday's 18-hole leaders, stocky Jules Huot, Quebec, the Canadian P. G. A. champion, whose two rounds were 67 and 72, and the blond dapper Paul Runyan, White Plains, N. Y., who had 68 yesterday and 71 today.

Bunched at 140 were Willie Klein, Miami, with 72 and 68, Frank Walsh, Chicago, 72, and 68, and Denny Shute Chicago, 70 and 70.

The ever-dangerous John Revolta, Milwaukee, P. G. A. titlist, was alone at 142, by virtue of two 71's. At 143 were George Smith, Chicago, 70-73; Willie MacFarlane, Tuckahoe, N. Y., 70-73; Tommy Armour, Boca Raton, Fla., the 1935 winner, 73-70, and Henry Ciuci, Flushing, L. I., 73-70.

Recent Kayo Of Risko Revealed His Appalling Lack Of Condition

By John J. Romano

Babe Risko enters the new year still leader of the middleweight division. Not because the Syracuse scrapper is the best 160-pounder in the world. Rather because he was foolish enough to think that what Marcel Thil, the French claimant of the world's title, did to Jock McAvoy he could duplicate.

It is a new matter of record that Thil continues to make a joke of American pretenders to the crown. Thil whipped McAvoy easily. Whipped him so badly that English sports experts considered him through after several mediocre showings in his native land. Thil also stopped Gorilla Jones, recognized titleholder by the National Boxing association and Vince Dundee when the latter was tops as a middleweight in any part of the world.

Risko's manager made the grievous error of trusting in a "gentlemen's agreement" to weigh not more than 165 pounds for the McAvoy fight. Jock's weight was 168 1-2 pounds. This is a shade closer to the light heavyweight poundage than that of the middleweights. Honor among thieves is as much as platitude among fight-managers, as a general rule, as that of trusting a child near a heat-reddened stove. The desire to outsmart the ignorant, trusting one is as great as that of the unsuspecting child to touch the glowing spot. The burn is painful to both. To the manager more so because it not only shows him up to be an ignoramus when it comes to "smart" handling, but the inferiority of his fighter as an accidental champion is quickly seen by the public.

McAvoy Not So Hot

Risko's knockout by McAvoy does not make the latter a great fighter. His right hand lead was a sucker punch. No ringwise fighter would have left himself open to such a blow. It only went to prove Risko's lack of ability, which had been shown heretofore when he failed to kayo Teddy Yarosz, who fell and injured his knee in the fourth round of their fifteen-round championship bout. The Syracuse battler was certainly Lady Luck's chosen favorite that eventful evening.

Accepting a fight against a heavier man after conclusively proving he was not a bargain to New York fight fans after a dismal showing against the shop-worn Vince Dundee was another error of judgment. The turnout for the Risko-McAvoy was the poorest a world's champion has ever known.

After being hit with a "sucker" punch Risko showed commendable gameness by promptly getting up. Lacking experience he did not know any better. The truth of the matter, as voiced by a veteran trainer at the ringside, was that Risko should have been smitten on the "conk" with a bottle and painfully taught to take the full benefit of the count.

A fighter shows his ignorance of the fine points of the game by getting up without a count when badly dazed. Experience teaches a man to take all that is coming to him, and losing the round he should make the most of it by getting his wits together, stave off a cascade of blows, and come out stronger for the next session. Risko did not do that. He rose and, lacking experience, did not know how to cover up. The result was that Babe suffered more knockdowns in one round than Primo Carnera did in eleven hectic sessions with Max Baer.

His First Kayo?

Risko—his manager is more to blame—has no excuse to offer. True he was beaten by a heavier antagonist, ably assisted by a smart manager. But that does not erase the blot on his record.

The knockout was publicly listed as the first suffered by Risko. If those who swallowed such a tale took the trouble of checking up Babe's exploits as a navy battler and asked any San Diego fight fan about a meeting with Swede Burglund, they would have learned that the navy champion suffered such a defeat long before he sprang into national prominence a year ago at Scranton, Pa., when he was credited with a technical knockout over Teddy Yarosz. On that occasion Risko was the supposed sucker. A year later, less ten days, Risko proved the sucker by virtue of McAvoy's deadening fists and his manager's smartness.

Risko has but to look up the files to learn that experience is a fighter's greatest asset. On the same card with Babe, a four-year amateur star of national fame was the victim of a knockout at the hands of a professional with less than a year's experience.

Sedgewick Harvey, Golden Glove and Inter-City champion, made his debut as a pro against Jimmy Fantini. Harvey went along well for two rounds, outjabbing and outdancing his rival. A low blow by Harvey should have been the signal for Fantini to retire gracefully. Instead Jimmy swarmed all over Harvey and battered him shamefully before the surprised negro realized that a low blow in professional boxing only means a warning and the loss of the round.

Experience All Important

Came the third and Harvey persisted in sending them below the belt. Fantini did not appeal to the referee. He covered his condition by feinting wild swings and keeping his opponent from getting in close. Came the fourth and Fantini worked his less experienced rival into the ropes and, shoving his head out of the ring, proceeded to belt him on the jaw before the referee could pull him away.

Harvey was draped on the ropes and as dizzy as Risko was when McAvoy landed the first punch. Before Harvey could extricate himself he was hit in the body several times and as he sagged another right caught him flush on the jaw and the fight was over.

The Fantini-Harvey result was nothing more than could be expected as that resulting from the Risko-McAvoy abbreviated feature. Risko and Harvey showed they lacked what makes a successful, or great, fighter. Experience!

So many contests are won or lost on this important phase of the game that it is not to be wondered why a smart manager takes his time in bringing a young, promising fighter along. Risko's manager has learned his lesson. The next time he starts his champion he may not prove so trusting as he was two weeks ago at Madison Square Garden.

A'S ANNOUNCE COMPLETION OF DEAL WITH RED SOX

ATHLETICS SEND CRAMER, M'NAIR TO BOSTON CLUB

Johnson And Neimic Sent To Philly With Unannounced Sum

PHILTDELPHIA, Jan. 4.—(AP)—The Athletics tonight announced the trade of Infielder Eric McNair and Outfielder Doc Cramer to the Boston Red Sox in exchange for Pitcher Henry Johnson, Infielder Alfred Niemiec and an undisclosed sum in cash.

Roger Cramer

The deal is part two in the A's-Red Sox trading which began with the sale of First Baseman Jimmy Foxx and Pitcher Johnny Marcum to Boston at the major league meetings last month.

Cramer is regarded as one of the standout outer gardners in the major leagues. He is 28 years old and has been with the A's since 1929, when he was signed as a free agent. He lives at Manahawkin, N. J.

McNair, a resident of Meridian, Miss., was the first-string shortstop and an infield sparkplug of the A's last year. He was purchased from Memphis, Tenn., in August, 1929.

Cramer batted .332 in 149 games last season, and has been a consistent .300 or better hitter for the last few years. McNair, apparently affected by the poor showing of the A's in 1935, turned in only a .270 average in 137 games of the season.

Cramer was discovered by Cy Perkins, now Mickey Cochrane's coacn with the Detroit Tigers, while he was performing on New Jersey sandlots. Connie Mack farmed him out to Martinsburg in the old Blue Ridge league in 1929, and he led that circuit with a .404 record.

McNair was purchased after he batted .391 for Knoxville in the South Atlantic league.

Johnson, the pitcher coming to the A's, is a right-hander. He formerly was with the New York Yankees for several seasons, and began twirling for Boston in 1933. He is a native of Bradenton, Fla. Last season he saw action in only 13 games, performed in but 31 innings, and had a record of two wins against one loss.

Niemiec, who also comes to the Athletics, was with the Syracuse International league Chiefs for part of last season. He is a former infielder for the now non-existent Reading New York-Pennsylvania league club.

No announcement of the cash involved was made, but estimates are that between $300,000 and a half-a-million was deposited in the A's treasury in the two deals—that involving Foxx, and the one announced tonight.

With the announcement of this deal, which had been reported for weeks, Connie Mack about completed the wrecking of his ball club. With Foxx gone, the A's had lost the last star of their 1929-31 team, which won three American league pennants and two world's championships. Cramer and McNair were understudies on that combination, and their departure leaves the A's with few prospects for the coming campaign.

On the other hand, the acquisition of the infielder and outfielder, as well as Foxx, by the Red Sox, should provide Owner Tom Yawkey and the Boston fans a team of pennant winning calibre for 1936.

OLE MISS MITTMEN TO BATTLE L. S. U.

UNIVERSITY, Miss., Jan. 4.—(AP)—The first Southeastern conference boxing engagement of the season for two standout teams will be staged here January 15 when Ole Miss meets the 1935 champions from Louisiana State university.

Coach Jess Alderman, in announcing the date, said the University of Mississippi will have a big array of seasoned talent to put against Ed Koury's champs. Likely entrants from Ole Miss are: Vernon Shaw, heavyweight; J. P. Bilbo, light-heavyweight; Joe West, middleweight; Hazel Lackey, junior middleweight; Johnny Cook, welterweight; K. O. Smith or Ray Holder, lightweights; Tony Rosetti or Elmo Ballard, featherweight; and Cliff Schultz, bantamweight.

ATLANTA CAGE MEET TO OPEN ON FEB. 20

ATLANTA, Jan. 4.—(AP)—Dates for the second annual southern invitational basketball tournament here were announced today as Feb. 20, 21 and 22.

Teams of outstanding ability whose records justify their challenge for southern supremacy are to be invited. The Atlanta Y. M. C. A. is the defending champion.

An authoritative source said Knoxville and Chattanooga's Big Four showed up well last year and are certain to be invited again.

Officials of the Southern Basketball association also are seeking championship teams from Mississippi, Alabama, Virginia, Louisiana and Florida.

'OLYMPIC NEW YEAR'

MUNICH, Jan. 4.—(AP)—The Olympic games are to mark new year's celebration in the "party capital."

Huge displays of fireworks with the Olympic signs will "geet the Olympic year after the period of preparation."

Garmisch-Partenkirchen, where the Olympic winter games will open February 6, is situated in the neighborhood of Munich.

Fight Game In East Flops Without Joe Louis On Card

McAvoy And Steele Prefer To Campaign On Their Home Grounds

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Professional boxing has tumbled to such a low state in the east that it no longer pays a performer to make a trip of any length unless Joe Louis is his opponent.

That is the principal reason why Jock McAvoy suddenly returned to England for the holidays and why Freddie Steele is highly content to ply his wearing trade on the Pacific coast.

Under current conditions, McAvoy and Steele—that would be a match despite the disparity in poundage—can collect more coin on their home grounds than they can hope to make on what formerly was big time.

Steele, against formidable foemen such as Vince Dundee, whose jaw he broke, and Gorilla Jones, drew $18,000 and $17,000, respectively. The Tacoma Tagger drags down 30 per cent. Expenses are normal.

Steele, battling Babe Risko, whom he probably would flatten, would play to net receipts of $25,000 in Seattle. This for a non-title affair, with the 155-pound Steele stepping on the scales with lead in his hands or being made officially overweight in some such manner.

If Risko elected to put his American middleweight wreath on the block, the shot no doubt would draw $50,000. Madison Square Garden or any other arena couldn't begin to give the combatants shares of that kind of money at this time.

There is serious talk that Jimmy McLarnin is contemplating taking a final whirl as a middleweight. That would be right down Steele's alley. McLarnin and Steele would coax more dollars through the bucks office in Seattle than the Irishman, in the present set-up, could hope to with any other warrior elsewhere.

Steele Rejected Scrap With Heavier McAvoy

McAvoy, boasting the lightheavy and middleweight championships of England, is a light-heavyweight. He agreed to make 166 pounds for Risko the night he knocked the Syracuse Pole down a half dozen times and out in the first round, but bounced on the scales at 168 1-2.

That's the gentleman Jimmy Johnston offered Steele in the Garden. Yes, sir, Johnston certainly was looking after Steele's welfare.

At that, Steele might belt McAvoy out, despite the undeniable class the Briton showed in flooring and outgalloping the highly regarded Al McCoy, who made a trick weight, and placing a lily in Risko's duke.

Freddie Apostoli, flattened by Steele in 10 rounds in San Francisco, can put a few more victories under his belt and again wiggle his forefinger in the direction of Steele. When that time comes, you may look for another $25,000 gate.

Ray Actis, a San Francisco light-heavyweight, with explosive knuckles but who is a swinger, has been starching rivals up and down the western slope. Actis seeks an appointment with Steele, but will not agree to do 160 pounds. That is another possible party for the thunder-fisted Tacoman and some nice money, with expenses normal.

Work For Tacoma Lad

Lou Brouillard is well thought of on the coast. Working against Steele, the southpaw would fill any fight hall in San Francisco or Seattle. Paul Pirrone is another good opponent for Steele in Seattle. So is Frankie Battaglia. Bouts between Steele and Pirrone and Steele and Battaglia would be old-fashioned punching parties.

If any promoter can show Dave Miller, manager of Steele, where his boy can better himself in the east, the Tacoma clouter will come a-hopping. Miller demands a guarantee, however.

Miller views the situation sensibly. McAvoy, the finest English warrior to invade these shores since Ted Kid Lewis, obtained a flying start in repelling the very formidable McCoy in what was considered a mild upset. With that build-up still hot, McAvoy climbed into action against Risko and drew only $8,000 net in the Garden. McAvoy's share was 20 per cent, or $1,600.

Little wonder that McAvoy came down with acute nostalgia. The Briton sized up the light-heavyweight situation and realized that he could make more money on home soil against less formidable opposition and with less expense.

Would Bring Steele East

The light-heavyweight class is much in the same condition as the middleweight in the east. It has been said that Steele could come to the Atlantic seaboard and fight himself into an attraction as McLarnin did. Yeah? Well, McLarnin found a natural setup. His foemen were top-ranking Jewish idols with the favor of New York cloak-and-suiters.

There is only one way of enticing Steele to the Garden pronto. Just let Risko risk his American crown, or chuck Marcel Thil in there at 160 pounds.

That's the way the east can land the boy who perhaps is the most fiery-fisted middleweight the coast has seen since Stanley Ketchel. Steele would be only too happy to accommodate either Risko or Thil at weight regardless of his percentage or the size of the gate.

Steele scored nine knockouts in 13 starts in 1935. Freddie dropped Young Stuhley three times and Tommy Rios twice in taking the decisions. The Tacoma lad repulsed Jones in 10, and took a decision from and knocked out Mike Payan. Other knockout victims were Baby Joe Gans, Indian O'Dell, Al Rossi, Dundee, and Swede Bergland.

Steele really should come east. A puncher like this chap is capable of doing most anything. He might even stir up some interest in middleweights something that hasn't existed since Mickey Walker and Ace Hudkins had it out.

CHAMPION WINS EASY TRIUMPH IN SEMI-FINALS

Buxby Defeated, 6-3, 6-0; Florida Star Upsets Gilbert Hall

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 4.—(AP)—The second annual mid-winter tennis tournament will wind up here tomorrow when Wilmer Allison, top ranking tennis player of the nation, meets Arthur Hendrik, of Lakeland, Fla., in the finals of the men's singles event.

Allison breezed through to a victory in the semi-finals today when he easily defeated Martin Buxby of Miami, Fla., 6-3, 6-0. Hendrix scored a mild upset when he came from behind after losing the first set to J. Gilbert Hall of East Orange, N. J., and won the match by a score of 0-6, 6-3, 7-5.

Allison was at top form in his semi-final match, forcing Buxby into repeated errors. His placement shots were clicking perfectly and he had the Miami player running to all corners of the court to make returns.

In the Hall-Hendrik match a real battle developed. Hall started off using drop shots which baffled Hendrix and he ran through the first set at love. But Hendrix began to get his eye on the ball in the second stanza and won 6-3. In the final set, after forcing it to 5-all Hendrix broke through for the two winning games.

The finals of the doubles match also scheduled for Sunday afternoon, will find Ernie and Eddie Sutter paired against J. Gilbert Hall and Hal Surface of Kansas City. The Sutter boys are defending doubles champions of the Sugar Bowl tennis meet.

They advanced to the finals today by disposing of Arthur Hendrix and Frank Guernsey of Lakeland, Fla., 6-0, 6-4.

Hall and Surface won their semi-final match by eliminating Wilmer Allison and W. T. Caswell, 6-3, 6-1.

BIG GAME HUNTER TO LECTURE HERE

Public Invited To Hear Gus Peret And See Film Wednesday Night

A lecture by Gus Peret, famous big game hunter, and showing of motion pictures he made in Africa will be sponsored by the Monroe Hardware company and the DuPont Powder company here Wednesday night, it was announced yesterday by Charles Seay, DuPont representative here. The public is invited to attend the affair, which will be held in the court room of the city hall at 7:30 o'clock.

Peret is a crack shot with rifles, revolvers and shotguns. One of his stunts is to draw profile pictures of characters with .22 rifle bullets on sheets of tin, shooting the 225 shots necessary, rapid fire in four minutes.

He made 13 trips to Alaska and the Yukon hunting the giant Kodiak bears, grizzlies, moose, mountain sheep, caribou and other game of the far north. After hunting over the west and Alaska and the Yukon, Africa came next. The expedition flew from London to Africa, making the trip in seven days by plane, that would have taken 35 days by boat. Arriving at Nairobi, Peret left on "safari" for the greatest game country in the world, the Serengeti plains, with 17 black boys and three trucks and two cars.

From five to ten thousand head of game would be seen every day. From 10 to 20 lions would be seen daily, and they were not afraid of the sportsmen, simply sitting and looking at them. The lions could be approached to from 75 to 50 yards before they either walked away gracefully, or started to charge. It was always the lioness that started the trouble. One group of 18 lions was the largest bunch seen.

Peret took many thousands of feet of motion pictures of the game, the country and the natives, and secured some unusual specimens of African game for different museums. The expedition was brought to a close on account of Gus' partner being caught and mauled by a big black-maned lion. Gus killed the lion off of his partner, and he was not seriously wounded, but died the third day from gas gangrene from the decayed matter on the lion's teeth.

Peret has made a study of the game in Africa, their habits and methods of life, in order to be able to photograph them in the clearest manner possible. Some of these photographs were made under conditions of considerable danger. They have been shown to many organizations of sportsmen and have aroused great enthusiasm.

JUNIOR TERRY GETS JOB AT GREENVILLE

GREENVILLE, Miss., Jan. 4.—(AP)—Bill Terry, Jr., unlike his famous daddy, apparently plans to break into baseball's front office by the front door.

Terry, Sr., went in the back way to the managerial office of the New York Giants from the playing field, but young Terry will start in the business with a white collar job.

Terry was here several days ago discussing plans for the Greenwood baseball club, which he owns.

He announced that his son would be business manager for the club.

Horton's Golf Trail Led From Ozarks And Now He Booms Game Back Home

Business Back In Missouri Picks Up When Smith Is Winning

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Jan. 4.—(AP)—Ten years ago golf in this city was a game for a few leisurely business men who could afford it, and Springfield had the only course in the Missouri Ozarks, outside Joplin.

Youngsters in their 'teens, aside from caddies, seldom ventured out on the local course because (A) they'd get in the way of the older players, and (B) they didn't care anything about the game in the first place.

But that was before a 17-year-old caddie at the Springfield Country club began to click off pars and birdies and shoot the legs out from under chagrined older players who tried to beat him. His name was Horton Smith, and he was a tall, gangling, good-looking youngster with a pendulum swing.

The "young upstart" won the city amateur championship, then, with no competition on the immediate horizon, decided to turn professional. He tried to get a job at the new Hickory Hills course then under construction. Failing in this, he went elsewhere for his start.

He Popularized Golf

This Horton Smith later made golf one of the two most popular sports in his home town, not so much by what he did here but by what he did elsewhere—in big-league competition.

Termed the "Joplin Ghost," and "The Tall Pine of Missouri" and other more or less appropriate names by the golf world at large, to Springfield he's the boy who made golf what it is in these parts today. Recently he opened his winter tuornament campaign with first money of $2,500 in the $10,000 Miami-Baltmore meet, and fans immediately recalled that record-breaking winter campaign of 1928-29 when Smith scorched fairways and green to win something like $13,000 in prize money.

That was the beginnig of the golf boom here. His phenomenal success started people talking—and sent many a duffer to the course to see what the game was about. The more tournaments he won in those blazing days five or six years ago, the more golfers flocked to the courses here, and before long Springfield had five links instead of one, and a sixth was under construction.

He Inspires Caddies

Spurred by Smith's success, other Springfield caddies began to polish their games and sprout out as professionals on their own. Now Springfield has five native sons who are full-fledged pros. They are Ren Smith, Horton's brother, who only recently succeeded Horton as professional at the Oak Park (Ill.) Country club; Haydon Newton, pro at Grand Junction (Colo.) Country club; Leonard Dodson, at Pembine (Wis.); Herman Keiser, at the Glenstone club here, and Tom Talbot of the Hickory Hills Country club here.

Ren Smith, Haydon Newton, Talbot and Dodson were caddies here 10 years ago, just as Horton was, but it remained for Mr. and Mrs. Perry Smith's youngest boy to show them the way, and to prove to the critical Ozarkian home folks that a golf professional can amount to something.

As Smith Goes—

They play golf the year 'round here now, and all three courses are jammed to capacity during the summer months. Two other courses were lost when Uncle Sam built his $3,000,000 federal hospital. Buildings covered one of the courses and the hospital staff took over the other for its own use.

With the meteoric rise to fame of Smith, golf became so popular here in 1929-1930 and 1931 that the city's professional baseball club in the Class C Western Association lost $60,000 in two summers. The ball club owners finally started night baseball and this combined with Smith's three-year slump which dampened some of the interest in golf here, has enabled baseball to prosper again.

With Horton away to a fast start in the winter campaign, baseball officials here are praying someone won't go out and make night golf popular by introducing phosphorous-covered balls. For as Smith goes, so goes the popularity of golf in Springfield.

PUTS TEAM IN RED

FORT WORTH, Jan. 4.—(AP)—Keeping a football team in victuals is quite an expensive proposition, as Business Manager Ray Wolf, of the Texas Christian Horned Frogs, recently found. In looking over expense items, he found that the team used 10 bottles of catsup at each meal during the trip to and from the Santa Clara game!

Thrills And Record Speed Expected On Bob-Sled Run

Olympic Course Provides Thorough Test For Competing Teams

GARMISCH - PARTENKIRCHEN, Germany, Jan. 4.—(AP)—The twisting, speedy, nerve-testing Olympic bobsled run on which the world's best bobbers will compete in February is called the ultimate of its kind.

Its builders expect not only speed records but more—a thorough test of ability, strength and courage. Simultaneously they maintain it is safe enough for novices or reckless drivers.

It lies high above this town in the shadows of the towering Zugspitze and Waxenstein peaks. It has sixteen curves, so designed that an error of judgment on one is increased on the next and speed is reduced.

A flat-surface sketch of the course resembles a huge hairpin, for its finish, far below the start is almost on line with the takeoff. Its biggest curve is near the half-way mark, a sweeping rounded bend called the Bavaria curve.

In its few hundred feet, the builders say, victory or defeat will be decided, for the sledders must negotiate, at almost top speed, two sharply banked and sudden smaller bends.

From that test the racers sweep through the longest straight stretch, a part of which is called the Wasserwand, or water wall, into the end, which forms a perfect "S."

The first hazard after the start is the Killian loop—apparently simple but made with the idea that an unwary team will be trapped, because of the great speed, into making too wide a swing on the second series of twists, called the Labyrinth.

At that point the sleds reach a speed of more than 47 miles an hour. Then come the Ritter von Halt, the Kreuzeck and Bavaria main curves, each emphasizing any previous mistake.

At several curves stands have been built so spectators can obtain a wide view of the course and the finish line. Opposite these is a high control tower, which has telephone connections with all parts of the course in order to time and direct the runs.

Announcements and news about the progress of the races are to be broadcast from the tower.

From the finish line the sleds will be hauled to the nearby funicular station and conveyed up the slope to the starting point.

"So satisfactory an arrangement has been achieved on no other run in the world," says the official publication of the publicity commission for the XI Olympic games.

"The best bobsleigh teams of the world will find a run worthy of Olympic competition in Garmisch-Partenkirchen."

S. T. H. Zentzytzki, who designed this and the Lake Placid Olympic runs, believes two bad features of previous courses have been solved here—the breaking of the rims on curves because of the strain, and automatic steering on curves that reduced skill and excitement.

Curves, he says, were built here not in the oval shape but like railway curves. Thus the sudden intense centrifugal force was eliminated, "and the driver retained complete control of his sleigh."

When an old run was being remodeled to form the present course, an automobile was used to test the sharpness and angle of the curves. Some banks are of stone over which ice blocks are placed.

In the middle of the route is an electric cable for communication to the tower, and a water main to facilitate icing.

NEVILLE BOXERS MEET LAFAYETTE

Tigers Open Season Against South Louisianians On Jan. 17

The Neville High school boxing team, now hard at work for its 1936 campaign, will open its season against the powerful Lafayette High school Lions at the Neville auditorium a week from next Friday, January 17, according to present plans, Coach Percy Brown announced last night.

The Tiger mittmen, who returned to work Friday, will have to work overtime all this week and the early part of next week and competition for positions on the twelve-man team will be exceptionally strong in the light-weight classes. Several of the Neville boxers worked out through the holidays and are already in fine condition.

Coach Vincent Saia is building another strong team at Lafayette, and the Lions, who have always been capable of putting up good fights, will be in good shape.

After Lafayette the Tigers have a match scheduled with the State Champion Baton Rouge Bulldogs for February 17, here, and Istrouma High school for February 21, here. Other meets, with Farmerville, Homer, the north Louisiana championship Choudrant team and DeRidder, are being arranged. Return matches will be given Baton Rouge and Istrouma on successive nights, February 27 and 28.

The Tigers will have representatives for all twelve weight divisions this year and promise to give Monroe another strong team that hopes to recapture its north Louisiana and state titles, lost last year to Choudrant and Baton Rouge, respectively.

The ring at Neville has been moved from its basement quarters to the spacious Neville High school auditorium's stage, providing the Bengals with one of the best ring settings in the state. Under the new arrangement, 4,000 persons can be accommodated comfortably with "ringside seats." The seating arrangement will allow a capacity of 2,000 spectators on the stage, it is claimed, and another 2,000 with first-rate seats in the auditorium proper.

Among the leadings contenders for places on the team are Darius Crews, 165-pound state champion; Nick Danna, "Shorty" Green, "Shorty" Earl, Milo Mattinson, Ernest Pierce, Tom King, Tony Lasuzzo, Manier Cannon, Warren Wilkerson, Jimmie Martin, Marvin Spaugh, Rex Robinson, Ed Endom, P. A. Poag, J. W. Walters, Vaughan Payne, Walter Brady, Charles Chambers, Marvin Gleason, Alvin Gleason and Billy Clements.

HIGHER EDUCATION TAKES IN SKIDORS

BRESLAU, Germany, Jan. 4.—(AP)—There is a "German University for Ski Sport" now.

The reichs ministry of education conferred the title on the Breslau university because it especially sponsored winter sports on account of the nearby Riesengebirge mountains. Its students turn out to be the most successful skiers.

Today the university is the center for German skiers in quest of higher education.

ALABAMA AGAIN WHIPS GREENIES

Crimson Tide Cagers Make It Two In Row By 34-To-25 Score

UNIVERSITY, Ala., Jan. 4.—(AP)—Alabama made it two in a row from the Tulane basketball team here tonight, walloping the invaders, 34 to 25, in a hard-fought encounter. Alabama won the first game of the series Friday, 26 to 20.

"Big Jim" Whatley, center, was high scorer for the game, his 11 points coming from three field goals and five foul shots.

FORMER FLYWEIGHT CHAMP HITS SKIDS

TORONTO, Jan. 4.—(AP)—Back in 1927, when the harvest was heavy, they hailed Albert (Frenchy) Berlanger as king of the flyweights. Now they send him off for a 10-cent beer.

The little fellow who once made $7,300 in an evening works for $15 a week in an east end beer parlor, and he's glad to get it. A few years ago he belted the crown from the brow of Ernie Jarvis, later losing it to bounding Frankie Genaro.

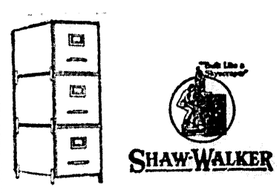
He's thinking of "getting somewhere," forgetting the days of heavy spending and trying to build an income on which to rest his future security.

He's still the poker faced fellow he used to be, but he's a little roly poly—140 pounds is a lot of heft for a flyweight.

His last fight was in 1930, but he hasn't any of the delusions of many old gladiators—the feeling that they can match hand and eye and endurance with the younger fellows.

Frenchy feels he has a couple good ones left in his right, however, and he's saving them for an imposter who goes about the province getting into difficulties and then identifying himself as Berlanger.

"I'd just like to meet him—once," he said.



SHAW-WALKER

STEEL TRANSFER CASES

NOW ONLY $3.40

When the famous Shaw-Walker "Lifetime" steel transfer cases are priced so low you can no longer afford to trust stored records to fiber or other makeshift containers.

1. Rats and mice love to chew fiber cases and their contents; steel cases afford absolute protection against these rodents.
2. Steel cases protect records against dampness; fiber cases soak it up.
3. Cheaper storage is provided by "Lifetime" steel cases. They will be serviceable after the third and fourth generations of cardboard cases have given out.
4. Steel drawers operate with ease under any load; fiber drawers wedge, stick, always cause annoyance.
5. Steel cases can be stacked to any desirable height without sagging or hindering easy drawer action.

Know that when you turn to your stored records in time of need they will be there — clean, legible, ready for the emergency. Store in steel for safety!

CLARK MEETS MASKED MARVEL IN RETURN MATCH

SEATTLE YOUTH ASKS FOR CRACK AT STEELE AGAIN

Vern Claims He Can Beat Marvel If His Mask Is Left Off

Vern Clark, clever Seattle youngster, has asked for and received a return match with the Masked Marvel, revealed last week as Henry Steele, Pennsylvania veteran. The two will meet again at Roosevelt stadium Wednesday night in the main event of the weekly mat show.

Last week Clark posted his end of the gate that he could unmask the Marvel. He did, but he lost the match while he was tugging at Steele's hood. He claims he didn't get a fair shake and asks for a chance to redeem himself.

With both Clark and the Marvel posting forfeits, one "betting" that he could remove the mask and the other that he couldn't, last week's match was a tug of war between the two, with Clark struggling to tear the hood from Steele's head and the Marvel attempting to keep his features covered. Clark was more bent on removing the hood than winning the match, and Steele pinned his shoulders while the Seattle youngster was taking off the mask. Hence, Clark won his "bet" and saved his purse but Steele won the match.

When the match was over and the Marvel had been declared the winner, he attempted to conceal his face with his bathrobe and towel. As he was leaving the arena, a group of fans hopped him and tried to rip the robe from his face in an attempt to get a glimpse of his mug. There was quite a scramble at the dressing room door and Steele finally escaped after his dressing gown had been torn in half. Referee Butch Martin, who was knocked down by the Marvel in the second fall and in turn floored Steele in the third stanza, was knocked down in the melee at the stadium door and suffered a skinned arm for his trouble. He and the Marvel may be expected to continue their feud Wednesday night.

Steele may encounter further trouble when he appears for the weekly show at the stadium. Promoter Charlie Bruscato announced yesterday that Steele positively would not wrestle with his mask on. Steele just as positively announced that the mask would be in its accustomed place when he takes his stand against Clark. It remains to be seen just who will win out in the side argument.

Bruscato said last night that he would book an all-scientific match for the semi-final. He said Don McNaught, the fast Canadian youngster, would be brought back as one of the principals in the match, but added that he had not signed a newcomer that he is angling for to oppose the clever McNaught.

Both matches will be best two out of three falls, with the main event limited to two hours and the semi-final having a one-hour time limit.

DO YOU REMEMBER?

One Year Ago Today—Glenn Cunningham, of Kansas, won the 800-meter indoor run, defeating a field of six, in 1:57 at Brooklyn.

Five years ago today—Max Schmeling was removed from the heavyweight throne by the New York Boxing commission for his failure to fight Jack Sharkey.

Ten Years Ago Today—Jake Schaefer regained the world 18.2 balkline billiard title by defeating Edouard Horemans, of Belgium, 1,500 to 890, in Chicago.

CARDINALS TO PLAY 34 EXHIBITION GAMES

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 4.—(AP)—Thirty-four exhibition games, including four in Havana, Cuba, and 17 with major league opponents, were announced today as the St. Louis Cardinals' spring schedule.

Secretary Clarence Lloyd also said the team would go through a longer training period than in 1935. Pitchers and catchers will report at Bradenton, Fla., Feb. 23 and all other members of the squad Feb. 25.

The schedule:

March 5, 6, 7 and 8, Cardinals at Havana, opponents yet to be chosen; 11, Athletics at Bralenton; 13, Phillies at Bradenton; 15, Athletics at Fort Myers; 16, Brooklyn at Bradenton; 17, Yankees at St. Petersburg; 18, Yankees at Bradenton; 20, Tigers at Lakeland; 21, Red Sox at Sarasota; 22, Phillies at Winer Haven; 23, Braves at St. Petersburg; 24, Red Sox at Bredenton; 25, Columbus at Avon Park; 26, Detroit at Bradenton; 27, Senators at Bradenton; 28, Rochester at Bartow; 29, Dodgers at Clearwater; 30, Cubs at Bradenton; 31, at Columbus, Ga.

April 1, at Albany, Ga.; 2, at Atlanta; 3, at Birmingham; 4, at New Orleans; 5, at Houston; 6, at San Antonio; 7, at Dallas; 8, at Oklahoma City; 9, at Tulsa; 10, at Springfield, Mo., 11 and 12, Browns at St. Louis.

BUSINESS PICKS UP

ARCADIA, Calif., Jan. 4.—(AP)—In place of the 138 pari-mutuel machines operating at Santa Anita track last year, 200 are taking care of bets this season.

Cunningham Beats Hornbostel In Feature Of K. C. Events

Winning Golf

By Lawson Little

In 1923 I became a junior member of the Waverly Country club in Portland, Oregon, and it was a fortunate occurrence to my golfing career. For it was then that I met Dr. Oscar F. Willing. I was a youngster about 13 then and was struggling with my game in the worst way, and believe me, I had my troubles. Dr. Willing, one of the finest all time putters and an experienced Walker cup player, took me under his wing and gave me some of the pointers that he had learned through a number of years' play.

Outstanding above all the many things he told me was his system of putting. His grip with the left hand was rather revolutionary to me. I used my left hand in the putting stroke the same as in any other until he showed me his way of holding the club, a way to keep the blade of the putter square to the ball.

Dr. O. F. Willing's putting grip. Little describes the advantages of this grip in the accompanying article.

Non-Rolling Wrists

Instead of holding the putter in the fingers of his left hand, he used a palm grip, that is, he let the putter shaft run up along the life line of his left hand and then folded his fingers over the shaft of the club. The "V" formed between the thumb and index finger points straight up to the center of the face. The thumbs are on the top of the shaft, and the right hand is used the same as in any other putting stroke. Contrary to the wrist position for other shots in the game, the top of the left wrist is forward, or up, instead of down, the opposite of being cocked. This tends to prevent rolling the wrists and makes a natural back and forth pendulum swing, and the putter blade is kept perpendicular to the line of flight throughout the stroke.

Either the overlapping grip or the reverse-overlapping grip can be used. I personally use the latter as does Bobby Jones, Tommy Armour, Paul Runyan, Horton Smith, Johnny Revolta and a host of others.

I believe it should be left up to the individual to select a stance that gives him a feeling of confidence and comfort. Most good putters play the ball more off the left foot than the right, because this will aid them to hit straight through the ball and catch it a little more on the upstroke—thus giving the ball an overspin which will tend to make it have a truer roll. Most of these players spread their feet about a foot and keep most of their weight on the left foot throughout the putting stroke.

Tip From Cruickshank

The greatest single hint I have ever received to aid my putting was to keep my body and head perfectly still throughout the putting stroke on putts of 15 feet or under, especially as I use a wrist stroke.

Bobby Cruickshank gave me this suggestion shortly after my return from England in 1934. I was playing a practice round before the open championship at Merion with Bobby and Tommy Armour. After I had missed about four short putts, Bobby turned to me and said, "Try holding your head and body still. You look like you are about to do a Charleston when you putt." I followed his advice and immediately the putts started to drop.

All of those people who had the opportunity of seeing Johnny Revolta in action, when he won the P. G. A. championship at Oklahoma City last October, realize the importance of good putting.

In this particular tournament Johnny was more than just a good putter—he was spectacular all through the week, starting with his first match against Hagen, whom he defeated 2 up. He climaxed his week of phenomenal putting against Tommy Armour, who was representing the veterans. In the morning round, Johnny had 11 one-putt greens, a remarkable performance, and yet his medal score was just even par—70. If he had putted normally, say only five one-putt greens, he would have scored about 76 and probably would have been one or two down instead of four up. Johnny's driving seemed good but he was having trouble with his second shots. He more than made up for his wildness in this department of the game by his work around the greens. He certainly kept the gallery in a permanent state of suspense when he got that putter in his hands.

Word From The Hague

While I was in Oklahoma City, I had a chance to talk to Walter Hagen frequently. On one of these occasions he turned to me and said: "Lawson, you are a bold putter, that is, you go for most putts, so frequently your ball rolls past the hole, sometimes as much as eight feet. I have found it very beneficial to watch the ball as it goes by the hole, noting the break. This helps me judge the roll on the return putt."

SPORT SLANTS by Pap

Jimmy Caras, of Wilmington, Del., the new pool—beg pardon, pocket billiards champion—is a rarity in the ranks of cue titleholders. He is both modest and retiring. Pool champions are seldom of that stamp.

While the 25-year-old champion has a retiring nature, his game is marked by daring and nerve. Hand him a cue and a piece of chalk and he will go to work without the least bit of hesitation. No shot stumps him. His judgment is fast and his technique sure and confident.

In the recent play-off for the title he downed Erwin Rudolph, of Cleveland, 125-53, in 16 innings. Caras went about his work with the coolheadedness of a battle-seasoned player and at no time was the veteran former champion able to match the skill of his young opponent.

The victory lifts Caras up to the affluent class, for the championship practically assures him an income of about $10,000 this coming year. Not bad for a youngster of 25 who learned the game on the Y. M. C. A. tables in Wilmington. There's plenty of money awaiting the cue champion who is blessed with color as well as the ability to handle a cue. Ralph Greenleaf, just about the greatest of pool champions, made considerably more than $50,000 in his best year.

The pool table manufacturers had better give up trying to change pool to pocket billiards. After 22 years of effort the game is still "pool." New York room owners voted to go back to pool five years ago. Jack Doyle, the veteran proprietor of Broadway, can't recall that a single customer in his room ever asked to play a game of pocket billiards—it always has been "pool" and nothing else.

Willie Hoppe, runner-up to Welker Cochran for the three-cushion title, is to have another crack at the title when he meets Cochran in a challenge title match at Chicago. It is about the only billiard title the veteran Hoppe has not snared in his long career.

Cochran downed Hoppe in Chicago last November before a crowd that was pulling for Hoppe with all its heart. The sentiment was so one sided that it was almost embarrassing. Surprising, too, for Cochran had his first lessons in cue skill in Chicago.

The attitude of the spectators did not seem to bother Cochran. If anything it spurred him on to his first victory over Hoppe with a world billiard title at stake. They had clashed three times previously for the balkline championship. On all three occasions Hoppe had been the victor.

To beat Hoppe, Cochran had to come from behind half a dozen times. Hoppe was at his best, but Cochran's late rally was too much for him. Perhaps Hoppe was a wee bit too confident of his own ability to continue his winning way over Cochran and thus under-estimated his opponent. Hoppe is determined to profit by that experience and be prepared for anything when the opportunity to redeem himself presents itself in the challenge match. It ought to be worth watching.

FAMOUS KANSAN WINS BY YARD IN 800 METER RACE

Mangan Beats Out Gene Venzke To Take Third Place In Event

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—(AP)—Glenn Cunningham, world record holder at one mile, fought off a determined last-lap drive by Chuck Hornbostel, former Indiana university star, to win the 800 meter special, feature event of the tenth annual indoor track and field meet of the Columbus council, K. of C., before a capacity crowd of 6,000 at the 106th infantry armory tonight. The famous Kansan won by about a yard in the good time of one minute, 55.2 seconds.

After allowing Bill Ray of Manhattan college to cut out the pace for the first lap, Cunningham went into the lead. Hornbostel, now a graduate student at Harvard, was content to stay in fourth place until the bell sounded for the final lap.

Three-quarters of a lap from the finish Hornbostel, moving up at a rapid clip, was at Cunningham's shoulder. Then, apparently having trouble running on the flat armory floor, he stumbled momentarily. The slip cost him about a yard and he was unable to regain the distance.

Joe Mangan of the New York A. C., former Cornell runner, beat out Gene Venzke of Pennsylvania in the last few strides to take third place.

Frank Nordell of Philadelphia, former New York university runner, conquered Joe McCluskey of the New York A. C., national 5,000 meter champion, in the 3,000 meter invitation, first of the featured events.

Nordell, an added starter competing unattached, overtook McCluskey by a stirring final lap sprint to win by ten yards in eight minutes, 42.6 seconds.

Milton Sandler, national 600 meter champion, repeated last year's victory in the "Columbus 500" running the 500 meters in 1:00.1. Harry Hoffman of the Curb Exchange A. A., 1934 winner, was moved up to second when John Wolff of Manhattan was disqualified. Arthur Keen of Fordham was third.

The crack Manhattan team of Matt Carey, Val Riordan, Lou Burns and Howard Block won as it pleased in the college and club 1600 meter relay, beating St. John's of Brooklyn and the Columbus council team. The time was 3:16.8.

Eulace Peacock of Temple was forced to take second place in the 60 meter heat of the special print series after winning his preliminary heat at 80 meters. Peacock trailed Edward Sullivan of the New York Curb Exchange, who traveled the 60 meters in seven seconds flat. Manny Krosney of New York university was third.

Al Threadgill of Temple won the high jump with a leap of six feet, six inches. Arthur Byrnes of New Utretch high school, New York, took second with the aid of a 3 1-2 inch handicap. W. Eipel of Manhattan took third in a jump-off with Victor Cohen of City college, New York, after they had tied at 6-5.

Edward O'Sullivan, New York Curb Exchange A. A. sprinter, won the 100 meter dash of the special sprint series in 10.8 seconds to equal the world's indoor mark, set by Bob McAllister in 1930 and later equalled by Karl Wildermuth and Ed Siegel. O'Sullivan gained the trophy awarded on the point basis with perfect score of three points. Ed Siegel finished second a step ahead of Peacock in the 100 meters.

Peacock finished second in the point score with a total of six points. Third place went to Siegel with 9 points. Phil Cody collected 10 points to finish fourth.

NATIONAL ANTHEM REVIVES PUGILIST

BELFAST, Northern Ireland, Jan. 4.—(AP)—Flat on the canvas, after a straight right to the jaw, a fighter was brought to his feet by patriotism.

Police Constable Hughes of London was the victim. His seconds were trying vainly to revive him.

Then the band struck up the British national anthem.

Hughes shook his head, raised himself, and brushed his attendants aside as he stood dutifully, if groggily, to attention.

Big Six Adopts '3-Ring' Basketball But It's Not Of The Circus Variety

'Three Circle' Innovation Seen As Route To Better Cage Game

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 4.—(AP)—The three-ring idea, whereby Big Six conference quints hope to take the "greater circle" route direct to better basketball, came through its public debut with flying colors.

The innovation concocted at a meeting of five conference coaches calls for a third circle 12 feet in diameter—similar to the two free throw circles—inscribed about the center-jump circle.

All tip-offs after "held ball" are executed in the nearest of the three circles—the center ring or either of the two free throw areas—and all players except the two jumpers are barred from the circle until the ball is tapped.

Coaches expressed the opinion this "zoning of the jump ball" would speed up the game, eliminate many out-of-bounds plays and, because of the restriction keeping players other than the jumpers out of the "jump-ball" area, would minimize the advantage enjoyed by exceptionally tall players. They said it would increase scoring, too.

First Test 'Highly Satisfactory'

First tested when Kansas met Ottawa (Kan.) university in a non-conference game, the idea was described as highly satisfactory, particularly from the standpoint of curtailing out-of-bounds plays. Heretofore, many "jump balls" occurred near the edges of the court, where the slightest tip in the wrong direction might send the sphere outside.

When the ball is tossed up in one of the three large circles, it takes more than a tap to send it across the boundaries. In fact, it takes a good healthy slug.

The new wrinkle also gives coaches the opportunity to work out scoring plays from three distinct points on the floor in the same manner that center tip-off plays have been mapped for years. It minimizes the advantage of a tall center in that virtually every player—tall, short, fat, lean—will jump at some time during the game without the handicap of crowding by the others.

The idea is another indication of the advance of the game since Dr. James Naismith, now a member of the University of Kansas faculty, invented it at the Springfield, Mass., Y. M. C. A. college back in 1891.

Allen Is Bell-Wether

The Big Six, led by the veteran Dr. F. C. Allen of Kansas, has pioneered many experiments looking to improvement of basketball. Allen, whose record as a coach testifies to his ability, was the moving spirit last season in the experimental games in which the baskets were hoisted to the 12-foot level, with field goals stepped up to the value of three points, instead of two. His theory was that goals two feet above standard height would equalize the abilities of long and short players. The hoops are still 10 feet above the floor, however.

Tabulated statistics of the "three-circle" games will be presented to the National Association of Basketball Coaches and the rules committee. Whether the idea will become a fixture in the national rules depends largely upon these statistics.

IRISH CELEBRATE END OF PITT JINX

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Jan. 4.—(AP)—Notre Dame athletes are entering the new year happy in the thought that the jinx held by Pittsburgh over the Irish for several seasons has been broken definitely.

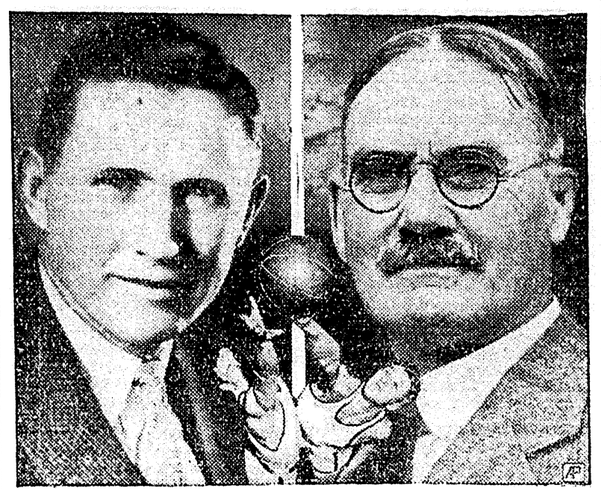
In track, golf, cross-country and football the Irish were superior to the Panthers in 1935 and now the basketball team hopes to begin the new year with a victory over the scrappy Pitt five.

The basketball team after losing four straight to Pittsburgh will attempt to reverse the decision when the two teams clash January 10 at Pittsburgh.

It really amounted to a jinx last year when the Irish led for the first 25 or 30 minutes only to lose, 27-25. It was discovered later that a defective watch allowed the game to run an extra 12 or 15 minutes.

DUDAS BEATS DELANEY

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—(AP)—Steve Dudas, Edgewater, N. J., heavyweight, handed Al Delaney of Detroit a drubbing in their six-round main bout at Ridgewood Grove tonight. Delaney twice was saved by the bell when he was in bad condition and barely lasted to the finish. Dudas weighed 190 1-2, Delaney 181.



Dr. C. F. Allen (left) and Dr. James Naismith—one developed basketball, the other invented it.

Brown Bomber Starts Preparations For Retzlaff Match Jan. 17

CHICAGO, Jan. 4.—(AP)—Joe Louis settled down today to the task of earning his first million dollars.

The Detroit Bomber began training for his 15-round bout with Charley Retzlaff at the Chicago stadium, January 17, the first of his 1936 campaign, which he expects to culminate in a heavyweight championship battle with James J. Braddock in New York next fall.

In less than 19 months, since he fought his first professional engagement in Chicago, Louis, just 21 and yet to have his first shave, has rolled up a bank roll of $371,000. He aims to roll up the other $600,000 by the time the present year fades into history.

Gradually taking on weight in the absence of summer sunshine to take it off of him, the Brown Bomber figures to scale 203 pounds when he shuffles into the center of the ring against Retzlaff. He will be heavier for this battle than for any engagement in his spectacular rise to ranking heavyweight honors. He believes he will blossom into a scrapping 220-pounder next summer. He scaled 195 pounds when he knocked out Primo Carnera, jumped to 198 3-4 when he forced King Levinsky to surrender, 197 1-2 for Max Baer, and finally 200 1-2 against Paulino Uzcudun.

Jack Blackburn, trainer of the fistic marvel, says the added weight will make Louis a more dangerous fighter than he was in 1935.

"He's a finished puncher now," Blackburn said, "and with 20 more pounds on his frame, he will be unbeatable because I believe he will become a harder hitter. The short vacation he has had since he beat Paulino Uzcudun has done him a lot of good and made him eager to resume training. His work for the next few days will be light. All he will need to do is to watch his diet and gradually take off the excess weight he has accumulated during the holidays."

CRACKERS TO TRAIN AT GULFPORT, MISS.

ATLANTA, Jan. 4.—(AP)—Spring training for the Atlanta Crackers is scheduled to begin March 4 at Gulfport, Miss., with the battery candidates reporting on that day and the infielders and outfielders four days later.

The players will train at Gulfport for 23 days and then return here for 15 days of exhibitions and practice at Ponce de Leon park before embarking on a campaign to defend their 1935 Southern association championship.

President Earl Mann said today 14 spring games are on the club's program with a possibility that a practice game with a semi-pro outfit at Gulfport will be added.

The practice schedule includes the New York Giants twice, the Philadelphia Athletics twice, the New York Yankees three times and the St Louis Cardinals and the Philadelphia Phillies once each.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—(AP)—When 84-year-old "Judge" Stephen McKeever retires soon as president of the Brooklyn Dodgers, he'll be succeeded by his daughter, Mrs. James Mulvey, wife of one of the vice presidents. . . . She has been active for some time in helping shape the club's policies. . . . Bernie Bierman will not discuss reports that Tulane is dingdonging at him to come back. . . . Jimmie Foxx and Bing Miller are improving their stamina pedaling bicycles around a Philadelphia gym.

Arch Ward reports Minnesota and Princeton are trying to get together on a football date for 1937. . . . Too bad it couldn't have been 1935. . . . Chuck Smalling of the Mississippi coaching staff received the nicest Christmas present of all—a baby girl . . . As long as he can draw $3,132 merely for flopping foes like "Man Mountain" Dean, Danno O'Mahoney doesn't care a hang what they say about the wrasslin' racket. . . . Neither would we.

Too bad Kit Klein, the Buffalo skater, didn't come in for more attention when the boys were voting on 1935 sports achievements. . . . She won about everything in sight on the ice, including the national amateur and North American amateur outdoor championships and the national amateur, North American and western indoor championships. . . . Also she established several world records and gave a good account of herself in the world championships at Oslo.

Glenn Cunningham, the great miler, in town for the K. of C. games, corresponds regularly with a group of orphans in the Kansas State Orphans' Home. . . . Glenn is the boys' No. 1 guy. . . . It was front page news in Boston the other day when Jimmie Foxx arrived for a visit. . . . Jimmie predicted: "We'll be tough to beat." . . . General Manager Eddie Collins beamed and agreed. . . . Southern Methodist Mustangs got their Christmas money by autographing old footballs and peddling them to admiring Texans for anything they would bring. . . . Gene Sullivan, sports ed of the Atchison Gazette, started the new year right by sending in a batch of juicy notes. . . . That's a hint. . . . Jess and Virgil Barnes, former Giant pitchers, are in business at Holton, Kans. . . . Both are fat and around 40. . . . Left field fence at Crosley field, Cincinnati, is 40 feet shorter than the right field wall, but southpaw batters have consistently outhit the right-handers over a three-year stretch.

EDDIE STOCKWELL IS NEW ARCADIA COACH

ARCADIA, La., Jan. 4.—(Special)—Eddie Stockwell, former All-State halfback on the Baton Rouge high school team and star football and track man for Louisiana State university, has accepted the coaching position at the Arcadia high school, succeeding R. A. Hassell who resigned at Christmas to rest a while before taking up the study of medicine.

According to E. R. Hester, principal of the Arcadia high school, Stockwell has started preparations for a boxing team and invites the schools in the northern part of the state to communicate with him in arranging for matches in that sport. Stockwell has also started work toward building a track team for the various meets over the state this spring.

It will be remembered that Stockwell was the winner of the 220 yard dash in the Southern conference meet of 1932, at which time he lowered the fifteen year Southern conference record of Danny Jenkins. After this record, Stockwell went to the Olympic tryouts in Chicago and was nosed out by Eddie Tolan. Tolan, it will be remembered, went on and won the world's championship. Stockwell has won all 36 medals in field and track meets all over the United States. While a pupil in the Baton Rouge high school he broke several state records in track.

CUBS' STREAK IS FEATURE OF 1935 PENNANT BATTLE

National League President Says Feat Was 'Immortal Exploit'

(This is second in a series written especially for the Associated Press by national sports leaders on results of 1935 and prospects for 1936.)

By Ford Frick
(President, the National league.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—(AP)—Perspective is building up with each passing month to make that September 21-game winning streak of the Chicago Cubs stand out stronger, taller and brighter against the skyline of the 1935 sports calendar.

We are beginning to realize now that we saw unfolded a page of baseball history in the making. Twenty-one straight victories! From third place to the pennant! The Cubs' conquest of the National league's 1935 championship truly belongs in baseball's gallery of immortal exploits.

It wasn't the longest winning streak in baseball history. The New York Giants of 1916 won 26 in a row, the all-time major league record. Their's was a September drive, too, but without a pennant as its climax.

As the background builds up around the 1935 season, the picture also suggests the pennant drive of the Boston Braves in 1914. Those Braves under George Stallings' command had no streak as long as 26 or 21 but they charged up the pennant hill all the way from last place.

The Cubs in 1935 weren't dark horses nor did they win as many as 26 straight but to my mind they belong in that very select group with the Braves of 1914 and the Giants of 1916.

Until the Cubs launched their rampage, the St. Louis Cardinals gave every evidence of becoming the headliners of this annual review. In July and August the Cards launched a drive reminiscent of the one that carried them to the pennant and world championship in 1934. In fact, it took something of a history-making nature, such as the Chicago streak, to relegate the Redbirds to second place.

There's a very bright spot in our second division, too—Cincinnati. The Reds won no pennant, but the "last to first" campaign launched by Powel Crosley, Jr., and Larry MacPhail made remarkable strides.

Brooklyn gave up lots of thrills, too, back there in the spring, and that opening drive of Casey Stengel's men stands as one of our season's bright spots. Pittsburgh provided the chief pitching sensation in the person of Cy Blanton, who wound up the season at the top of the list in the earned run rankings, a most remarkable achievement for a freshman.

Philadelphia, in the second year of Jimmy Wilson's management, made rapid strides toward developing a powerful team. One of the best achievements of the year came right at the close with the reorganization of the Boston Braves. Thanks to Bob Quinn's taking the helm there, the outlook for National league baseball in Boston is very promising.

I think baseball, together with the country as a whole, will enjoy 1936 even more than 1935. All prospects point that way and for our league the year will stand out a bit more prominently from the fact that we celebrate our sixtieth birthday on February 2.

The foundation of major league baseball, as we know it today, dates from February 2, 1876, when the National league was first organized. We hope for and are planning for a 61st year which will keep faith with those founders back there in the 70's.

TRICK KNEE LIKELY TO STOP LOVELOCK

LONDON, Jan. 4.—(AP)—Jack Lovelock, the famous miler, fears he may never again be able to attack the world's record.

He is experiencing trouble with a knee from which he had a cartilage removed two years ago.

Since then he won "the race of the century" against Glenn Cunningham, Bill Bonthron and other crack runners in America.

After that epic struggle, however, he met with little success, being twice beaten by S. C. Wooderson, of London, on British tracks.

Commenting on his disability, Lovelock said: "The less said about my knee the better. It is not right, and I am afraid it never will be right."

It is believed the strain on his knee during the American race adversely affected him in later events.

Lovelock is studying medicine in a London hospital, and, at the moment, thinking more about his professional future than whether his knee will fully recover and enable him to remain the world's greatest mile runner next summer.

FIGHTING GIBBONS FINALLY WINS TITLE

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Young Jack Gibbons, promising light-heavyweight who is following in the footsteps of his father, Phantom Mike, and uncle, Tommy, who fought Jack Dempsey for the heavyweight title, is the only champion in the family. But he isn't a boxing champion.

The story came to light after Jack fought here on the Louis-Uzcudun card. His father told it as follows:

"While attending the University of Detroit, Jack won the handball title at the university. After winning, he sat down and laughed. When we asked him what it was all about, he replied: "Well, I've got something on you fellows now. I'm the first champion in the family'."

Wild Kid's Row With Barrow Costly To Ruth Late In Career

(This is the second of four articles on Babe Ruth, the man baseball forgot.)

By Harry Grayson
(Sports Editor, NEA Service)

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—A wild kid's row with Ed G. Barrow proved costly to George Herman Ruth in the sere and yellow of his career.

When the Ruthian eye cast ambitious glances at the driver's seat, Barrow, his nemesis, always was there to thwart the old home run king.

Ruth wanted to manage the New York Yankees when little Miller Huggins, the man who straightened him out and whom he had learned to admire, died in 1929, but Barrow, business manager of the club, came up with a surprise choice in Bob Shawkey in 1930.

That Ruth was never to be given the opportunity to which he was clearly entitled became evident with the appointment of Joe McCarthy in 1931.

Ruth was something of a bad boy when he played with the Boston Red Sox, managed by Barrow in 1918 and '19. It is reported that on one occasion, while Ruth was pitching the Red Sox to their last American league pennant in 1918, Barrow locked the clubhouse door and suggested to the Babe that they have it out. The Bam is said to have walked out.

It was Barrow who first saw Ruth's potentialities as a long range hitter, and switched him to the outfield, where the home run records that followed were made possible.

Barrow Thwarts Ruth

Ruth and Barrow never did get along, however. They were no closer together when Barrow followed Ruth to New York in 1921. They were still far apart when the Bam left the Yankees for the Boston Braves last spring. And now the breach between Barrow, crowding 68, and Ruth, who will be 42 next month, is wider than ever.

Col. Jacob Ruppert undoubtedly would have given Ruth a whack at managing the Yankees, but ever since engaging Barrow, the brewer has left the direction of the outfit in the hands of that shrewd executive.

Barrow has an elephant's memory and plainly was convinced that Ruth couldn't manage himself, let alone 23 ball players.

Thomas Austin Yawkey, the young man of many millions, was a warm admirer of Ruth. The Babe was all set to go to the Red Sox as head man, but not after Edward Trowbridge Collins chatted with Barrow. Yawkey has the same faith in the judgment of Collins, his vice president and general manager, that Colonel Ruppert has in that of Barrow.

Ruth muffed opportunities to pilot the Chicago White Sox and Detroit Tigers. There are various stories as to how he missed out, with the tremendous figure of Barrow ever lurking in the background. After all, it was Barrow who labeled Ruth risky managerial timber.

Too Big For Baseball

Ruth made an office boy of Barrow and was a disturbing element in mere ways than one. The Babe went straight to Colonel Ruppert in his financial transactions.

The owner comes directly into the picture when a player merits consecutive contracts calling for $20,000, $30,000, $52,000, $70,000, $80,000, $75,000, $52,000 and $35,000, with the latter ones running from one to five seasons. Colonel Ruppert signed Lou Gehrig, too, but only because Columbia Lou was—and is—his pet and protege. All of the other athletes went to Barrow.

Ruth represented big money. In permitting him to slide out of the picture, American league owners forgot that they all got important money thorugh him. They took into consideration only the fact that the Babe was a pace-setter in salaries.

The Yankee problem with Ruth wasn't confined to the Babe himself. He told other members of the array what to ask for, and panned them if they agreed to accept less.

Ruth was a big man on the field and in business—one altogether too big for baseball, the game he saved and took to its dizziest height.

DICK TRACY

by CHESTER GOULD

HELP!

HEY, SAVOY! WHERE DID THEY GO?

WHERE DID THEY GO! WHY THEY SLUGGED ME, CUT THE HORSES LOOSE FROM THE WAGON, AND RODE AWAY.

HOW IN THE WORLD DID THEY ESCAPE FROM THAT SILO WHEN THE TRUCK RAN INTO IT?

THEY MUST HAVE MANAGED TO SCURRY DOWN INTO AN UNDERGROUND TUNNEL BELOW THE SILO BEFORE THE CRASH.

WE FOUND THE TUNNEL ENTRANCE AND WENT IN AFTER THEM, ONLY TO BE TRAPPED IN A COMPARTMENT RIGHT BELOW THE WRECKAGE.

WE HAD TO CLIMB OUT THROUGH BRICKS AND MORTAR.

THEY CAN'T HAVE MADE MUCH HEADWAY ON THOSE HORSES IN THE SNOW.

NO, BUT IT'S MORE THAN WE CAN MAKE AFOOT- AND WE WON'T BE able TO GET A CAR FOR AT LEAST A MILE.

MEANWHILE...

HOW MUCH LONGER ARE WE GOING TO STICK ON THESE THINGS, "CUT"?

UNTIL WE GET TO THIS LITTLE TOWN UP HERE! WE'LL GET A CAR THERE, AND MAKE FOR THE HIGHWAY.

YOU MEAN WE'LL SNATCH A CAR, "CUT"! WE DON'T DARE SHOW OUR FACES. THOSE G-MEN PROBABLY HAVE REWARD POSTERS HUNG IN EVERY STORE IN TOWN.

HEY, "CUT", LOOK! A FREIGHT TRAIN!

SHOOT!

SHE'S NOT EVEN SLOWING DOWN FOR THIS TOWN!

GRAB IT, "CUT"- AND KEEP CLIMBING!

SO THIS GUY TRACY AND HIS STOOGE THINK THEY'RE SMART, EH? WELL LET 'EM TRY TO CATCH "CUT" FAMON! THEY HAVEN'T SEEN ANYTHING YET.

IT'S STARTING TO SNOW AGAIN, TRACY.

WE'LL HAVE TO STEP ON IT. WE DON'T WANT TO LOSE THESE HORSE TRACKS.

FAMON IS JUST MAKING IT TOUGH FOR HIMSELF, BOYS. HE'S GOING TO END UP EXACTLY LIKE ALL THE OTHERS HAVE— ON A MORGUE SLAB!

Markets--Financial

Cotton

New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 4.—(AP)—Cotton sold off from 4 to 6 points in today's short session here.

The small decline was attributed to long liquidation in preparation for a possible decision on the processing tax on Monday.

Lower foreign markets at Liverpool and Bombay also induced some speculative selling.

The March position held a small net gain for the most of the session, but sold off in sympathy with other months in the final minutes of dealings.

Jan. closed at 11.59, March at 11.29 and May at 11.09 while in the spot market middling lost 6 points to 11.79.

The president's message to congress failed to cause a ripple on the surface of the cotton trade and prices held in narrow limits for the two hours of trading.

Exports from southern ports today totaled 28,436 bales.

AVERAGE MIDDLING PRICE

New York

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—(AP)—Today's trading in cotton was again restricted by a disposition to await supreme court decisions on the legality of the agricultural adjustment and Bankhead acts.

Fluctuations were attributed chiefly to technical readjustment. After holding fairly steady during the early trading on covering and trade buying, prices eased under liquidation with March selling off from 11.40 to 11.32.

The market closed fairly steady at net declines of 2 to 8 points.

Cotton futures closed very steady, 2-8 lower.

INDUSTRIAL AND REVIEW OF THE TWIN CITIES

ARMATURE WORKS REWINDS MOTORS

Industrial Machines Are Installed And Plants Rewired By Concern

In the engineering field the Monroe Armature works is called upon to rewind motors for new speeds and change motors to operate under new conditions.

Catering largely to industrial electrical work, repairs are made on electrical motors, control apparatus and power equipment. The local plant does not solicit business of general house wiring or automobile wiring except the rewinding of generators and starters.

Industrial motors are installed and large industrial plants, sawmills, etc., are rewired. All motors are, also, repaired by the local concern.

Only thoroughly skilled men are employed by the Monroe Armature works and the class of work turned out by the company is only the highest. M. S. Harrison, manager of the company, has operated the local plant for the past eight years and he has been in this line of work 15 years. At present he employs two experienced assistants.

Aside from the industrial field the armature works rewinds all kinds of automobile generators. Starters for all makes and model of cars are repaired. Estimates on this kind of job will gladly be given.

Used starters and generators are also bought and sold by the Monroe Armature works. These used items are reconditioned and put back into first class condition.

Inquiries concerning the work and estimates on any job will be given on inquiry. There is no obligation for this service.

Clarks

Mrs. Faye Estepe was hostess to her Sunday school class, the "Go Getters" of the Clarks Baptist church and their boy friends at a watch party held in the entertainment rooms of the church. In the early evening games and contests were enjoyed. The new year was welcomed by shooting fire works and other noise making. Hot chocolate and cake were served by Mrs. Estepe to the following present: Joyce Jackson, Bobbie Corbin, Marjarie Lewis, John Billy Hanchey, Dorothy Richmann, Howard Antley, Juha Perkins, Lloyd Christman, Shirley White, Byrd Buffington, Dwanna Megison, Clayton Fenton, Katherine Stringer, Mathew Meredith of Olla, Lois Knight, Eldon Kirk, Nellie Simmons, Ray Greene, Eloise Scaife, Willis Tarver of Grayson, Louise Stringer, Macon Kirk, Erline Henderson, James Henderson of Grayson, Sybil Banks, Ouida Hindman, Myrtis, Lorraine Richmann, Elaine Ferguson, Willie B. Perkins, Ben Richmann and the Rev. Paul Jones.

The boys and girls of the senior class of the Baptist Sunday school enjoyed a New Year's eve party at the home of Miss Helen Chapman. Following the games, offered as the evening's entertainment, sandwiches, cake and coffee were served. At midnight the party went to the church where they rang the church bell as the old year passed and the new year came in. The shooting of fireworks also featured the midnight celebration. The young folks returned to Miss Chapman's home where another serving of sandwiches, cake and coffee was enjoyed. The party included Mrs. S. H. Allbritton, class teacher, Miss Ada Woods, Misses Bertrice and Vera Corbin, Miss Evelyn Blair, Miss Virginia Thomas, Wilbur Kraft, Morris Andrews, Richard Fenton, Damon Bradford, John Webb, Jr., Hartford Jackson, Clifford Chapman, Oscar Chapman and Miss Helen Chapman.

The members of the adult B. Y. P. U. were the honor guests at a watch party given by members of the senior B. Y. P. U. in the B. Y. P. U. rooms at the Baptist church. The party gathered at nine o'clock and old fashioned holiday games were played. The shooting of firecrackers and a beautiful display of other fireworks was enjoyed during the midnight hour. Hot chocolate and sandwiches were served by Misses Odessa Streetman, Evelyn Skinner and Ethel Riser. Others attending the party were: Mrs. N. A. Keys, Mrs. Clyde Bradford, Mrs. Evans Reitzell, Mrs. M. D. Ballard, Mrs. R. G. White, Mr. and Mrs. M. G. White, Mr. and Mrs. John Dawes, Mrs. Charles Riser, the Rev. Paul Jones, Glenn Lee Green, Clyde Green and Richard Green.

Mrs. Louis Simmons was honored with a miscellaneous shower at the home of Mrs. Robert Morgan, with Mrs. Morgan, Mrs. Mack Brown and Mrs. Milton Simmons as co-hostesses. The honoree is remembered as Miss Louise Harveston of Clarks, a bride of last fall. Mr. and Mrs. Simmons left soon after their wedding ceremony for their home in Port Arthur, Texas, and this holiday visit was the inspiration for her Clarks friends to compliment her in this manner. Among the gifts received were linens, glassware and useful accessories for each room of the home. Hot chocolate and cake were served the following guests: Mrs. Alvin Grant, Mrs. Homer Goings, Mrs. Herbert Mays, Mrs. C. W. Wilson, Miss Dottie Dawes, Mrs. Kirk Black, Mrs. Alex Harveston, Mrs. Mack Brown, Miss Katherine Brown, Mrs. Eual Redman, Mrs. Lloyd Western, Miss Nellie Simmons, Mrs. Bob Gilbert, Mrs. Norman Simpson, Miss Mildred Bird, Miss Sentelle Johns and Miss Opal Simmons.

CONTEST WINNER TO BE ANNOUNCED SOON

Announcement of the winners of the Kelvinator contest which was conducted by St. John Electric company will be made the early part of the week.

Due to the large number of entries and the holiday congestion the judges were not able to reach a conclusion as to who would be the winner, H. A. St. John said yesterday.

The winner will be awarded a beautiful new Kelvinator by the local electric concern for the best letter on "Why You Want a Kelvinator for Christmas." The contest closed at midnight December 24th.

Mr. St. John stated that they were well pleased with the response and contestants should watch for the official announcement of the winner.

PROPER HIGHWAYS CUT CAR MISHAPS

Roads Should Be Constructed That Get Motorist To Destination Safely

The country needs a gigantic program of highway construction to make roads and streets safe, declares James D. Adams, chairman of the state highway commission of Indiana. He urges a system of divided-lane highways.

"It is fully as important to construct a highway that gets a motorist to his destination in safety as it is to build the highway at all," he asserted at a recent meeting of the American Association of State Highway officials.

"It must be admitted that putting the maximum of safety into our highways will increase their cost and will thereby reduce the number of miles which may be improved with present available revenue. But 36,000 dead and a million injured annually cannot lightly be tossed aside.

"We need but use the arguments at hand—the fatalities, the injuries, the property damage, the greater speed in moving traffic, the increased pleasure and safety to the motorist, and the tremendous amount of employment that the construction would offer.

"An industry which furnishes employment to millions, an industry which provides the thorougfares over which a tremendous amount of commerce moves, and industry which has 96 per cent of the people of voting age on wheels certainly should be able to convince our motoring public that a great system of divided-lane highways should be started."

Each time an air line purchases a $6,000 engine for one of its planes, it is necessary to spend between $25,000 and $40,000 additional for the operation and maintenance of it before it becomes obsolete.

IMPROVEMENTS MADE IN RADIO

Ford Motor Company Makes Announcement Concerning Auto Receiver

Numerous improvement to the Ford radio, of which the current year's production will total close to a quarter of a million sets, were announced for 1936 by the Ford Motor company.

From the appearance point of view, the most important change is the adoption of an invisible speaker, mounted above the windshield. The rounded roof lines of the car remain unbroken, while the listener has the benefit of car-level reception introduced in the Ford radio a year ago.

The set continues to be of six tubes, with a number of chassis improvements. The chassis case has been shortened and made more compact, fitting underneath the instrument panel and above the steering column. It is invisible to those sitting on the front seat.

The set has slightly increased sensitivity and external noises have been lessened, it is claimed. Internal circuit filtering now keeps out more external interference, such as from high tension wires and street cars, improving reception, especially in cities.

The speaker is of entirely new design. It is mounted flush on the header bar above the windshield. When installed it is covered by the car trim, completely out of sight. In the manufacture of the speaker, parts are held to tolerances as close as seven ten-thousandths (.00007) and one ten-thousandth (.00001) of an inch. The speaker cone has been redesigned to insure good reception right through the scale including high notes and bass notes. Instead of having a three-point tone control, a constantly variable tone control is now used.

SPORTSMEN TO ASK FOR ENFORCEMENT OF GAME STATUTES

CROSSETT, Ark., Jan. 4.—(Special)—Sportsmen residing in this section of Ashley county met at the Crossett high school Friday night for the purpose of organizing the Ashley county hunting and fishing club.

One of the principal aims of the club is to seek stricter enforcement of the game laws, and a rigid observance of the statutes governing quantities and seasons during which game may be killed. A vigilance committee for Ashley county was formed to report violations, and hope was expressed that adequate legislation for the protection of game would be enacted by the state.

Sportsmen from all sections of Ashley county have been invited to attend another meeting to be held next Friday night.

Officers of the new club who were elected at Friday's session are Homer Bryant, president; Edgar Stevens, vice-president, and Edward Allen, secretary-treasurer.

New York Stocks

By Victor Eubank
(Associated Press Financial Writer)

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Rail stocks spurted 1 to 2 or more points in today's brief market session, but mixed price movements spotted the remainder of the list.

The president's message to congress was received calmly and brokers said it was questionable as to what influence it may have had on equities. The rally of the carriers put the ticker tape three minutes behind floor dealings and transfers approximated 1,600,000 shares. The close was irregular.

The transportation group started late, but it made up for lost time during its speedy advance. Among the prominent gainers in this division were Santa Fe, Union Pacific, Louisville and Nashville, Atlantic Coast Line, N. Y. Central, Northern Pacific, Southern Pacific, Great Northern and Pennsylvania.

A steady to firm tone was shown by Standard Oil of New Jersey, Pierce Oil preferred, Montgomery Ward, Packard, Allied Chemical and General Asphalt. Among losers of fractions to a point or so were Chrysler, General Motors, U. S. Smelting, American Smelting, Schenley, National Distillers, Woolworth, Bethlehem, United Aircraft, Boeing and Douglas Aircraft. A loss of about 5 points was suffered by Waukesha Motors.

The aircrafts were still in a profit-taking area and the automotive section drooped following estimates of lower production this week, although the reduced number of working days were said to have accounted for much of the decline in output.

Commodities were narrow, as were the majority of foreign exchanges. Bonds were steady.

Financial quarters seemed to find some cheer in the Rosevelt statement that new taxes were not contemplated this year. The fact that no proposals for new legislation were made was also seen as helpful to business. Every one apparently was in accord with the sentiment regarding world peace.

Although some were inclined to perceive a little bullish fuel in the chief executive's words, securities circles noted that opponents of the New Deal were again challenged.

Rail equities came to the fore partly on expectations that the industrial progress of the past year will be substantially extended in 1936 and that net income of the carriers will thereby cover charges and put a number of the roads back on a basis where some dividends can be disbursed.

There was a large turnover in Packard motors following action of the company's directors in voting a 10-cent dividend, the first since December, 1931. A few of the oils were favored on report of an imminent advance in crude petroleum prices. Several specialties among the industrials continued to reflect earning optimism

TRAFFIC MISHAPS INCREASE IN 1935

Accidents In Monroe Advance By 34 Per Cent During Year

Five hundred and two motor vehicle accidents in Monroe during 1935 were reported to police, as compared with 374 motor vehicle accidents in the city during 1934, it was revealed yesterday in the monthly report of the police department.

The increase in accidents during 1935 was approximately 34 per cent over the figure for 1934.

Seven persons were killed in motor vehicle accidents in the city during 1935, as compared with three killed in 1934.

The increase in traffic accidents took place despite traffic safety educational programs conducted by the American Legion, Parent-Teacher association, police and Red Cross.

Four hundred and nine persons were given court summons or arrested as a result of traffic accidents during the year. Seventy-one charges of driving an automobile while drunk were preferred.

Police made 2,612 arrests for all cases during the year. The arrests were classified as follows: felonious homicide, 5; criminal assault, 1; robbery, 1; aggravated assault, 3; burglary, breaking and entering, 13; larceny, theft over $50, 12; larceny, theft under $50, 137; automobile theft, 7; minor assault, 404; embezzlement, fraud, 2; carrying concealed weapons, 48; sex offenses, excepting criminal assault, 50; drug laws, 9; liquor laws, 21; drunkenness, 709; disorderly conduct, vagrancy, 254; gambling, 35; all other offenses, 182; arrested for other jurisdictions, 24.

Total cases tried in the city court in 1935 were 2,147. Convictions were returned in 1,641 of the cases. Fines paid totaled $7,068 and fines charged work on the streets totaled $18,850.

The December report of police showed that 167 cases were tried in the city court in that month, $380 in fines was collected and $2,056 in fines was charged to work on the streets.

Seventeen burglaries and breaking and entering acts were reported in December.

CLAYTON-SICILY ISLAND HIGHWAY IS NOW CLOSED

FERRIDAY, La., Jan. 4.—(Special)—The Clayton-Sicily Island highway, which will be amiesited in the near future by the state highway commission, has been closed to traffic and a detour is now in use over the road as preparations are being made for the paving of the stretch.

The paving of this link of highway will give Concordia and Catahoula parishes another stretch of paving and will leave only a few gravel roads in this locality.

CHRISTMAS—1935

It takes a heap of living to make a house a home—without a wife, Christmas presents scattered about are not consoling. Tears avail nothing, but how can a man keep them back when his better half—his Wild Irish Rose, is seriously ill. Life certainly is treacherous at times—clear, cheerful and sunshiny—then cloudy, damp and depressing. Then maybe brightness and happiness again. Christmas 1935 was the most melancholy in a life time for me. I do though wish to express my sincerest thanks to all who visited my wife and I during the most trying time of our lives. The gathering of so many friends at my fireside reminds me of a precious Birthday party the neighbors gave me. I am describing it below: It was my first and only experience of this kind. Some neighbors came in and celebrated my 60th birthday with me. After it was all over and the neighbors had gone home, I got to thinking seriously—rehearsed the entire evening's program over and over—and have come to the conclusion that there are a good many good things here on earth worthy of any person's serious appreciation, more especially our neighbors. Good neighbors are indispensable. I live at 101 Breard Street. We are hardly considered any portion of the "four hundred" population, although good people. The men never quarrel in our neighborhood; the women hang over the garden fence while conversing; the children chase to and from house to house. The dogs do not chase the cats in our block. I notice a couple of blue jays often in the front yard; a mocking bird, too, has his nest in a nearby tree; and two fox squirrels are raising a family in the old oak tree in front of a nearby house.

I have been thinking seriously of building a bungalow in the south portion of town, but since the birthday party I am in a quandary. The jay bird's plumage seems brighter; the squirrels are more frisky; the mocking bird's morning song never sounded sweeter. The old landmark of a house I live in, after all, is home—the only home I have ever known. At times I have dreams of down on the farm—when fond recollection recalls them to mind. The orchard, the meadow, some chickens, bird dogs, and things that I like. But of course a man can not have everything he most desires all at the same time. And again since the birthday party, things look different. I think I had better remain with the neighbors.

Neighborly yours,
J. G. BELL.

P. S. New Year, 1936. Through the grief and distress caused by my wife's illness, my neighbors have been more than kind and considerate. I am still with the neighbors.

HE'LL MAKE HER PRINCESS AGAIN

Like his late brother, Alexis, Prince Serge Mdivani refuses to let romance interfere with his polo—and Louise Van Alen, ex-wife of Alexis and now engaged to Serge, seems perfectly willing that it should be so. The betrothed couple are pictured as they chatted between chukkers of the opening match of the polo season at Palm Beach, Fla.

FRED HUFFMAN'S FUNERAL IS HELD

Services Conducted For Victim Of Bridge Accident Here Friday

The funeral of Fred Huffman, 21, employed on the construction of the new Ouachita river bridge here who died shortly after noon Friday as a result of a fall from the bridge into the river earlier in the morning, was held at Manifest, Catahoula parish, Saturday afternoon. The interment took place in a cemetery there.

Huffman, when working on the east bascule pier, slipped and fell into the river. The American Legion truck was rushed to the scene and the river was dragged, with the result that the body was recovered in about 28 minutes after the accident occurred.

Efforts to resuscitate the man proved futile and he was removed from the river bank to the Vaughan-Wright-Bendel clinic, where every possible effort was exerted to restore him to consciousness.

The body was taken overland to Jena late Friday and to Manifest on Saturday, where the funeral was held.

Huffman's three brothers were engaged in the efforts of resuscitation. They were Hayse, Minice and Walter Huffman.

This accident was the first fatality that has marked the work of constructing the bridge here.

FRANK ARRANT HURT

Frank Arrant, 21, living at Clear Lake and employed by Carl Earl at that place, suffered the loss of three fingers of the right hand in a recent accident at the Earl sawmill. Arrant who was reported Saturday to be in a serious condition due to loss of blood, stated that he has relatives living in Monroe and is anxious to contact them.

HENRY C. RAY, JR. TO HEAD GROTTO

Elected To Head Local Organization For Third Successive Year

Teflis Grotto reelected Henry C. Ray, Jr., as monarch for the third successive year at the annual election of officers held Friday night.

Other officers who will serve the coming year are as follows: O. D. Gowins, chief justice; W. Perhamus, master-of-ceremonies; W. J. Bynum, Jr., veiled prophet; F. M. Culver, secretary; Henry Haas, treasurer; H. O. Hartman, marshal; J. R. White, captain of the guard; F. L. Speakman, sentinel.

An unusually large number attended the meeting and listened to plans proposed for the coming year. Dr. B. M. McKoin discussed the need of erecting a bandstand already proposed and for which plans have been presented to the city. It is expected to erect this stand near the new natatorium. He urged the members of Teflis Grotto to get behind the movement and see that it is brought to a successful culmination.

The speaker pointed out that Teflis Grotto has a 35-piece band with the members all wearing uniforms and full equipment for ceremonies, which have cost several thousand dollars.

This band was honored at the Southwest Grotto convention at Hot Springs last fall by being selected to play at the Army and Navy hospital and in the lobby of Hotel Arlington.

Plans are being formulated to get this band in readiness for the next Grotto convention at Beaumont, Texas, on Labor day.

CAR STRIKES TELEPHONE POLE SATURDAY MORNING

An automobile owned by Attorney George Wesley Smith and driven by David Hollinds of Rayville was badly damaged when it struck a telephone pole on DeSiard near Fifteenth street Saturday morning, according to a report filed with the police.

In his account of the accident Hollinds claimed that a car driven by J. D. McFarland of West Monroe was going in the same direction and made a sharp right turn without giving the customary signal. In order to avoid hitting the McDonald car Hollinds reputedly swerved his machine sharply to the right and crashed into the telephone pole.

None of the occupants in the cars were injured and neither of the drivers was held.

WORK PROGRESSES ON STREETS AT VIDALIA

FERRIDAY, La., Jan. 4.—(Special)—Work is progressing rapidly on the street paving projects under way at Vidalia in charge of the Louisiana state highway commission. With more than fifty workmen engaged in the amiesiting of the streets, the base has been set and binders have been placed on the street paving projects. The work takes in Vernon avenue, Carter avenue as far as the Missouri-Pacific depot and High street.

PUBLIC FORUM

WINDING TRAIL

To the Editor:

All day long I have walked down a winding trail, flooded with a limpid burst from a wintry, cooling sun. Long before transient, mellow beams flooded the morning; while dusk and light were tangled as one gray mass—I passed alone through the sleeping city. The stone of it high buildings rose stark and clear against the silver-scattered clouds. Below the towering structures nestled the even windowed houses; sleepy in the murmur and undertone of the city. The towers, the domes of buildings, the leafless trees—the city clustered and fringed with frost lay dreamless in white romance.

On beyond the city stretched the cold, rock-glimmering road; thickly flanked by the wild nameless trees. Along each side the pines rose dark and towering into the sky; above their needled domes the sun spilled its cooling glow on leaves long burned. Noon and afternoon slowly passed. The sun dipped into the west, and slowly sank into a spangled, crimson-gold web upon the horizon. Then the slow dusk blew in and darkness reigned supreme.

Like a healing taper the moon flared in the east; as a frail scimiter it cut the darkness and left in bold relief the mellow gold about the shadows. Somewhere within the shadows a mockingbird sang a sleepy tune to a cool rising breeze.

The rising breeze brought the light tang of cedar. Looking ahead I beheld their cold emerald forms, standing nonchalant in the moon light. And just beyond their tangled shadows bright lights reached out from tiny windows.

Turning from the trail I walked toward the house; dreaming of the beauty of the city, the sly magic of dawn, the splendor of the trail, and the brief loveliness of evening. Once within the circle of lamp-light the fairy disguise of the trail vanished—for there was light and home.

L. B. FAULK POST TO MEET HERE ON MONDAY

The first meeting of 1936 of the L. B. Faulk post, American Legion, will be held Monday night at 8 o'clock at the legion home. The post commander, Bill Perhamus, is urging that all members attend and a special invitation is extended to World war veterans who are not members of the post.

A complete report on the distribution by the legion and auxiliary of the Christmas booklet at the veterans' hospital at Alexandria and to veterans' families in Ouachita parish will be made.

The annual conference of post commanders and adjutants will be held on February 1-2 at Baton Rouge, according to announcement made by Department Commander A. J. Sichtermann. Membership awards will be made at this meeting.

Announcement has been made by the department commander that an unusual prize will be given at the department convention this year in New Orleans. The most outstanding legionnaire in the state will be awarded a trip to the national convention in Cleveland. The basis for the award will be all round work in and out of season for the advancement of the legion.

The commander of the L. B. Faulk post stated Saturday that he will work hard to win this coveted prize and elicits the aid of all fellow members to this end.

BREAD FINE FOOD FOR SCHOOL KIDS

Ouachita Baking Company's Products Are Used In Lunches

Each school day in Ouachita parish thousands of children carry their noon lunches to school. The lunches are of great importance, not only to mothers, but also to teachers and the entire community, because the school child's lunch has much to do with his health, his progress in school and his behavior.

This was a thought expressed by J. W. Rohr, president and general manager of the Ouachita Baking company, 2519 Lovers Lane. The baking company's feature product is Butter-Krust Bread, a bread favored in homes throughout northeast Louisiana and which is used in the school lunches of a great many children.

"Whether the child comes home or has his lunch at school, it is very important for him to have an energy food," Mr. Rohr said. "Bread is the chief source of carbohydrate foods and can be served in many appetizing ways.

"We feel that no finer, more palatable and wholesome bread than Buttter-Krust is made anywhere. Butter-Krust bread is a quick energy food. Its carbohydrates rapidly become glycogen, or blood sugar, and keep the muscles nourished so that the child does not become fatigued during his school classes."

The Ouachita Baking company also makes a variety of pies, cakes and cookies, any of which is a delicacy of substantial food value and highly valued by school children as the dessert of their lunches.

LOCAL DELEGATES BACK FROM MEET

Of the more than five thousand young people and leaders who registered in Memphis last week for the Young People's Conference of Southern Methodism, 164 were from the Louisiana conference. A special train carried most of this delegation while many went in cars over the highway. Those who represented the churches in and around Monroe were: Ten from First Methodist, Frances Smith, Neva Worthington, Ouida Collins, Katherine Perce, David Caldwell, Fred Coon, Jr., Billy Gannaway, R. W. Germany, and Miss Elizabeth Langford. From West Monroe were Helen Nowell and W. F. Mayo. From Gordon Avenue church went Maria Thompson. Reverend W. H. Giles and Edward Tisdale went from Bastrop; Elvie Norsworthy went from Collinston; Maurice Hart, conference vice-president, went from Sterlington, and Rev. V. D. Morris from Columbia.

A sound economic management of our utilities will mean a reduction in our electric rate, thereby attracting industries to Monroe.

THE RESULTS will be jobs for the unemployed; payrolls for the merchants; and monthly savings to consumers of electricity.

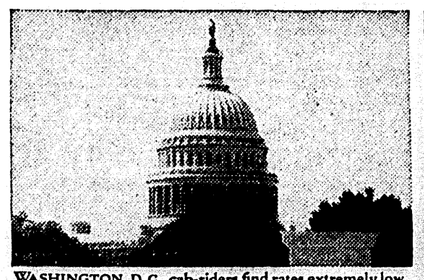
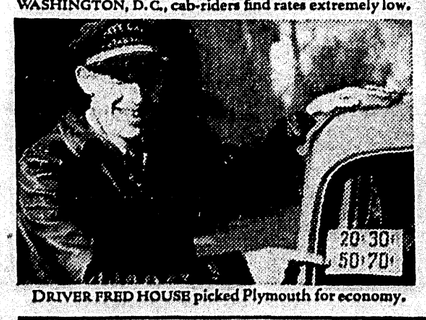
Washington Cab-Drivers Prove Plymouth Costs Less to Run

30% OF CABS OPERATING ON CAPITAL'S PHENOMENALLY LOW RATES ARE PLYMOUTHS



WASHINGTON, D.C., cab-riders find rates extremely low.



DRIVER FRED HOUSE picked Plymouth for economy.

PEOPLE LIKE CABS with the safety, comfort and smart appearance of big 1936 Plymouths.

VISITORS TO WASHINGTON marvel at the splendid taxicab service...and low rates. They see the high percentage of Plymouth cars in Washington's taxicab service. Registrations today show almost every third taxi is a Plymouth . . . and the number is increasing phenomenally.

Plymouth's economy is the answer . . . gas and oil economy . . . low upkeep cost . . . amazing ability to stand up under the grueling punishment of big-city taxicab service.

General Manager Harry Wechsler, of the City Cab Association—one of Washington's largest—says: "We find Plymouth has the operating economy necessary to give good cab service at Washington's low rates. More than half our cabs are Plymouths."

Garage Superintendent Seigel, who estimates that City Cabs run up a yearly total of fourteen million miles, reports: "Our Plymouth drivers get around 18 miles to the gallon of gas—in city traffic."

In Washington, D. C., they know a Plymouth costs less to run. You can compare "All Three"... and find out for yourself about Plymouth's famed safety, reliability and comfort... as well as economy!

By Eve Bradford

The old year with all its heartaches, its discouragements and disappointments has passed into oblivion. All our mistakes are left behind but all the good we have accomplished, all the love we have manifested toward our fellowman will live on through the ages. The good deeds and the kind words that ran through the old year like golden threads through rare old tapestry, will continue to illuminate our lives through all the days ahead. They are as ageless as the sands of the desert and will continue to bear fruit after we, too, have passed into oblivion.

During the year just passed we have all climbed steps that led into beauty and winding stairs that led into pain. We have opened doors that brought us sunshine and others that brought the rain. It is a well known fact that some days must be dark and dreary; but, as a whole, the year that has just vanished down the sunset trail was mighty good to most of us. We ourselves are responsible for the bogs of pettiness that engulfed us, for the egotism that marred the beauty of our days and for all the fault-finding and all the other corrosives that mar life. It is a good thing to remember that when we give the world the best we have the best always comes back to us.

After discarding the debris of noise-makers and foolish little hats of New Year's Eve and turning the first shining white page of the 1936 volume, we suddenly became aware that the year 1935 was a year of unexpected romances. So many young things jumped off into the abyss called matrimony. And others are hovering on the brink. One of our loveliest coeds went back to college with reluctant feet. She is wearing a magnificent sparkler, placed on the third finger by a certain party who was the cause of the reluctance to return to college.

Speaking of brides reminds us of that lovely child, Mary Ann Dixon Johnston, whose secret marriage last June suddenly exploded like a bomb in our midst. Tragic, indeed, was the sight of Mary Ann foraging among the onions and cabbages at the grocer's, making purchases for the first Christmas dinner. She was indeed a stranger in a strange land. Of course, we cannot vouch for this, but we heard that Bishop sneaked into the kitchen and rubbed the steak with a lemon to prevent another tough steak. Later, when dinner was served, Mary Ann announced that there would be no steak for dinner as it smelled sour and she gave it to the dog.

Another great American tragedy was the theft of William Bendel's football tickets to the Sugar Bowl game. A low-down thief entered his hotel rooms in New Orleans and stole, not only forty dollars worth of tickets, but his very best bib and tucker. Instead of Bill and Marie and their guests sitting on the forty-yard line, they huddled together somewhere in the great open spaces of the grandstand. And lucky they were to get seats of any kind at the eleventh hour.

They say the highest compliment we can pay is to be unable to describe the beauty of a house, a dress or a woman. And all we seem to know about the interieur of the Herman Masur home on New Year's Eve is that it was a scene of splendor, with beautiful women swishing skirts in the elegant drawing rooms fragrant with the perfume of exotic flowers and good-looking males, in immaculate formals, sauntering around. So many, many lovely women met and clasped hands that night. The hostess herself, in a shining gown of gold lame, and her beautiful daughter, Bertha Alice Shlenker, in shimmering white satin. Mrs. Simon Shlenker of New Orleans, trailing a smart black velvet gown with little puff sleeves of ermine, over the handsome rugs. Lovely as to face and figure, highly intellectual and filled with the joy of living, we found the moments spent in her company all too short. Rose Haas on the arm of her beloved son, home from college, smiling as usual and a few gay words for everyone. Mrs. Abe Marx, a delightful person with a most beautiful voice and lovely, gentle manner, was wearing a white satin rhinestone studded model. Two of Monroe's most beloved characters, Rabbi and Mrs. Heinberg, side by side as usual, with friends crowding around them. Good-looking John Gordon, clinking glasses with friends at the cocktail bar, and Herman Masur, everywhere at once, looking after his guest in customary genial manner. Minta Vaughan, out for the first time in many weeks, received quite an ovation when she appeared. Scarcely had she touched hands with friends before her doctor husband whisked her back home, so afraid was he that she would overtax her strength. Of course, there were tray loads of sparkling drinks for toast to the New Year and many joyous good wishes. The evening was, indeed, the apotheosis of a gay, good time.

Obeying tradition to the last ditch, a few kindred souls motored out to Sterlington plantation and spent New Year's day by Crary and Dug Smith's glowing hearth. Joe Isaacman, the dependable, appeared with three radios that were immediately installed and clicking off the latest football news. It was a gay company gathered in the high-ceilinged, old-fashioned plantation home, where the dining table simply groaned neath its burden of Virginia baked hams, sliced turkey and other edibles too numerous to mention. Nowhere in all the world can be found two other such ideal hosts as Crary and Dug. Not only on New Year's day but every day in the year the latch string hangs out in a most inviting manner and many there are who lift the latch and find comfort and peace or gaiety and amusement, as the case may be.

Please pardon this rather disconnected, spasmodic pitter-patter, but we have so much to tell you today. News of the Theus family, for instance, who gathered on Christmas day, sixteen strong, around the polished mahogany board where they have been greeting each other since infancy. Such a happy family they are. We would like to express a wish that the charmed circle will continue unbroken for many, many years to come.

The presence of Elizabeth Greene's lovely sister added lustre to the holiday festivities. We saw her and immediately fell in love with her soft voice and charming smile. She was wearing a cluster of white roses and valley lilies under her tilted chin. It seems that Howard Greene remembered the date of her third wedding anniversary and extended his congratulations with flowers.

Before the old year has passed completely from our memory, let us tell you about Carl and Louise Suttle, who, instead of buying each other a handsome Christmas gift as customary each year, hied themselves to a nearby grocery and filled baskets with all kinds of goodies for a needy family. They personally delivered the baskets on Christmas Eve and carried away with them a vision of happy faces, the radiance of which will warm the cockles of their heart through all the days to come.

Advocates Attendance At Alexandria Meeting

Mrs. Smith Is Chosen To Boards Of Library Commission And Society For Prevention Of Blindness

WINNFIELD, La., Jan. 4.—(Special)—Mrs. Albert L. Smith of Winnfield, president of the Louisiana branch of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, has accepted appointments to the advisory board of the Louisiana library commission and the advisory board of the Society for Prevention of Blindness.

Parent-teacher associations are vitally interested in helping promote and provide library books for schools and the proper development of children physically, mentally and morally is the organization's greatest concern; consequently, Mrs. Smith's appointments to the advisory boards will be appreciably felt by P.-T. A. members, parent-teacher leaders throughout the state said.

Urging Attendance

WINNFIELD, La., Jan. 4.—(Special)—Mrs. Albert L. Smith of Winnfield, president of the Louisiana branch of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, is urging full attendance at the mid-term meeting of the board of managers of the state organization in Alexandria on January 18.

The meeting, which will start at 9:30 a.m., will be held at Hotel Bentley. Plans for the state convention April 13-15 at Lafayette will be formulated.

Mrs. Smith said Mrs. B. F. Langworthy of Chicago president of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, will be a guest speaker at the Lafayette convention.

Bastrop P.-T. A.

BASTROP, La., Jan. 4.—(Special)—An address and vocal and rhythm band selections featured the December meeting of the West Side school Parent-Teacher association of the Louisiana branch of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers.

The address was made by J. P. Causey, principal of Central Grammar school here. The rhythm band numbers were contributed by students under the direction of Mrs. Mae Morris. The vocal selections were by Mrs. Tilbury's pupils.

Mr. Causey spoke on "What Makes a Good Citizen?" Both the band and vocal numbers were appropriate to the Christmas season.

Mr. Causey said a good citizen gets along well with his neighbors; faces problems and solves them satisfactorily to himself and to society; is a helper, cooperates well and is anxious to improve each thing that he does a second time and is not satisfied to accept or do the same old thing. Mr. Causey then showed how modern education trained students for these requirements of good citizenship.

The speaker was introduced by Mrs. St. John, chairman of the program committee, who presided over the meeting.

After the program and business session, a social hour was enjoyed. The mothers of Miss Montgomery's and Miss Justice's rooms acted as hostesses.

St. Matthew's P.-T. A.

Plans for the annual spaghetti supper of the organization were made and routine business was transacted at the December meeting of the St. Matthew's Parochial school Parent-Teacher association of the Louisiana branch of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers.

The spaghetti supper will be held February 12.

The meeting, which was held in the music room of the school and presided over by Mrs. Paul Keller, president of the association, was opened with a prayer, led by Mrs. A. M. Guerriero.

Mrs. E. J. BeDoit, secretary-treasurer, read the minutes and gave a financial report.

Miss Catherine McStravick, in charge of the cafeteria at the school, reported that milk and 25 dinners had been supplied 44 underprivileged children.

A collection of one cent from each member was taken to aid in defraying expenses of fifth district officials in carrying out their work.

The Christmas message from Mrs. A. L. Smith of Winnfield, state P.-T. A. president, was read by Mrs. Keller.

By-laws of the organization were read by Mrs. BeDoit.

Prayer for the speedy recovery of Mrs. L. W. Kessler, a former officer of the association, was offered.

An attendance prize, a crocheted collar was presented by Sister Stanislaus, principal of the school, to Mrs A. J. Massart. A turkey was awarded to Mrs. J. W. Spohrer.

The meeting was closed with a prayer by Sister Stanislaus.

Fairbanks P.-T. A.

FAIRBANKS, La., Jan. 4.—(Special)—A Christmas tree laden with half a hundred gaily-wrapped presents greeted members of the Fairbanks school Parent-Teacher association of the Louisiana branch of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, when they gathered at the school for their December meeting.

Routine business was quickly disposed of and a well-balanced program was presented under the direction of Mrs. Ham. Talks on the past, present and future methods of teaching history featured the meeting.

The past aspect of history was presented by Mrs. Ham. The present was depicted by Mrs. Simmons, with the aid of sixth grade students. The future of the study of history was outlined by Mrs. Vincent Marsala.

Other numbers on the program were songs, "Santa Claus Is Coming to Town" and "Jingle Bells," by third and fourth grade students; songs by mother singers, Mrs. V. Brazil, Mrs. W. Bender, Mrs. Harold Perry, Mrs. Fred Wilson, Mrs. H. P. Fiser and Mrs. P. J. Lochbaum.

At the conclusion of the program, members of the P.-T. A. were presented with gifts from the Christmas tree. Fruit cake and coffee were served by the hospitality committee.

Mrs. G. B. Wilson, president of the association, presided.

President's Message

The following New Year message has been issued by Mrs. Albert L. Smith of Winnfield, president of the Louisiana branch of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers:

"All Hail 1936! The new year opens before us, a new highway down which we will travel during the year, with opportunities for renewed service as mileposts along the way and a definite goal ahead. The year just closed held much for all of us. We are encouraged over the continued rising interest and enthusiasm in our work and have every reason to believe we shall go forward in the new year toward splendid achievements and greater progress. Whatever develops during the year we shall be richer in experiences, in wisdom, in knowledge and power, if we have given our best to the cause of childhood and have made every effort to live up to the ideals of our founders.

"A few days ago a third set of certificates came to the desk of the state president to be signed. These certificates indicated the completion of correspondence courses offered by the National Congress of Parents and Teachers. It was a great pleasure to sign these certificates and it is hoped the pleasure will be repeated many times during the year—not because of the desire to give special recognition, rather because of the knowledge certain individuals are now in a position to render more efficient service than they were before the courses were studied.

"On January 17 we celebrate the birthday of that great advocate of thrift—Benjamin Franklin—and it is especially timely to observe January 17-23 as Thrift Week. The dictionary defines thrift as "care and wisdom in the management of one's resources." We concede that thrift in financial matters is important, but equally so, are thrift in health, thrift in talents, thrift in time and energy. Children should be taught to be thrifty in respect to all these.

"It is the custom of all business concerns to take inventory, at least once each year, so let us, as parent-teacher units, pause in the beginning of this new year and take stock. How do we stand in comparison with our record of one year ago? Have we increased our membership and the enrollment of our study groups at least 10 per cent, thereby reaching more parents of more children? Are we giving more members an opportunity for active participation? Are our activities of real value to our homes, school and community? Are you stressing father membership or do the men of your school district still regard the P.-T. A. as a mother-teacher organization? Do you really use the parent-teacher magazine in your association or do your members still feel they are making a donation when they subscribe to this most worth-while publication? Has the standard of health been raised for your children through the promotion of a definite health program by your unit? Are you nearer a standard of superior association than you were this time last year?

"May I remind you that we serve more effectively when we transfer our words into deeds, and my wish is that the next year may be a happier new year because we have dedicated ourselves as never before to the service to little children."

New Boudoir Styles Offer 'Old-Fashioned' Femininity

Buffet Supper

A buffet supper, charmingly informal and accompanied by considerable beauty of detail brought friends together in the home of Dr. and Mrs. W. S. Kendall, with Mr. and Mrs. Harvey McDonald and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Williams, co-hosts.

Beautiful flowers created a festive atmosphere in the reception suite, where bridge was introduced, followed by the serving of the supper in the dining room from a perfectly appointed candle-lit table.

Enjoying this hospitality were Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Feazel, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Humphries, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Rinehart, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Eaves, Mr. and Mrs. John Guerriero, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Stinson, Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Mize, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Benson, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Steele, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Tommye Fortenberry, Mr. and Mrs. John Williams.

Miss Harriet Silliman White Weds Benjamin Dawkins, Jr.

Marriage Takes Place In Alexandria Jan. 1

Presiding Elder Of Methodist Church, Dr. N. E. Joyner, Reads Service At Wedding Of Prominent Couple

The affectionate interest of countless friends in Louisiana and especially in this city, is centered in the marriage of Mr. Benjamin Dawkins, Jr., to Miss Harriet Silliman White of Alexandria, on the first of January. Mr. Dawkins, born and reared in Monroe, is one of the most promising young lawyers in this section of the state. Although he is now making his home in Shreveport, Monroe still claims him for her own.

An account of the wedding appeared in the Alexandria Town Talk as follows:

"Miss Harriet Silliman White, daughter of Mrs. Richard Franklin White and the late Mr. White, and Benjamin Cornwell Dawkins, Jr., of Shreveport, son of Judge and Mrs. Benjamin C. Dawkins of Monroe, were married yesterday afternoon. The service was read at 5 o'clock by Dr. N. E. Joyner, presiding elder of the Alexandria district, at the First Methodist church, and the bride's grandfather, Mr. Horace H. White, gave her away.

"Many lighted candles cast a soft glow over the church, where smilax, silvered leaves and Easter lilies gave beautiful decoration. The tapers were in single holders on the window ledges hung with smilax and were also in standard branching candelabra, smilax entwined, in the choir and altar spaces, festooned with the vine and silvered leaves. At either end of the altar were baskets of stately Easter lilies.

"A program of organ music was played by the bride's aunt, Miss Willie Wynn White, while the guests were assembling, many of whom motored from Monroe, Shreveport, and elsewhere. Miss White accompanied Mrs. Golding Thompson's pre-nuptial solo, "My Desire," the singer's composition, and played the "bridal chorus" from Wagner's "Lohengrin" for processional. During the service she rendered soft music, a hymn, "Love Divine, All Love Excelling," after the closing prayer, and Mendelssohn's Wedding March for recessional.

"The bride was very radiant in her ivory satin gown. It was made along simple lines with a round neckline embellished in front with a spray of orange blossoms. The long graceful sleeves, full to the elbow, ended in tight cuffs closed with satin-covered buttons, the same treatment being used to fasten the back of the bodice. From a shirring at the back waistline, draperies reached to the full-fronted skirt to be clasped with an antique agrafe of gold set with pearls. A voluminous veil of illusion fell in billowy folds over the circular train and was attached, along with the shorter veil worn over the bride's face as she entered the church, to a cap held in place by a fillet of pearls that ended in orange blossoms at either side of the head. The bride's bouquet was a sheaf of calla lillies tied with white satin ribbon.

"Mrs. William Neville of McComb, Mississippi, was matron of honor and the bridesmaids were Miss Frances Rand, the bride's cousin, Miss Jane Dawkins of Monroe, the groom's sister, Miss Margaret Krumbhaar of Houma and Natchitoches, and Miss Wynnfred Holloman.

"Their lovely Grecian costumes were of white chiffon, accordion pleated as to sleeves and skirts with shirred bodices. The belts and buckles were of silver lame. Their close-fitting turbans were of matching chiffon and pleated and had a trimming of silver wrapped with chiffon. They wore silver sandals and carried arm bouquets of sensation roses, tied with green satin ribbons.

"John Dubuisson of Opelousas was Mr. Dawkins' best man and the ushers were Gilbert Faulk, Victor Davis, James Sparks and King Stubbs, all of Monroe, McLin White, the bride's uncle, of New Orleans, Paul King Rand, her cousin, Franklin White, her brother, and Whitfield Jack of Shreveport.

"An informal reception for the bridal party was given at the bride's mother's house. Mrs. White was receiving in a gown of sapphire blue velvet with which she wore a corsage of Columbia roses. The groom's mother was attired in a madonna blue crepe gown and wore a corsage of Columbia roses.

"White roses and white candles in silver candelabra were placed in the living room, where southern smilax graced the stairway and chandelier and banked the mantel shelf. In the dining room, where smilax was also used, the bride's table was laid with an imported cover, white tapers in silver holders and a silver centerpiece filled with bride roses. The cake was three-tiered, embossed with bride roses and lilies of the valley and from its base radiated symbol ribbons that found ending in tulle and valley lilies.

"Mr. Dawkins and his bride left by motor for Monterey, Mexico. When they return to Louisiana they will live in an apartment in Rutherford street, Shreveport. For traveling, Mrs. Dawkins had a smart oxford grey costume suit, a one-piece dress and swagger coat with a platinum fox collar. With this she wore black accessories.

"Mrs. Dawkins was graduated from Bolton High school and attended Newcomb college, where she was a member of Alpha Omicron Pi sorority. She is a granddaughter on the paternal side of Mr. and Mrs. Horace H. White of this city, and maternally of Mrs. George L. Silliman and the late Mr. Silliman of Rutland, Vermont, and Washington, District of Columbia. Her father was prominent in legal circles and was a member of the law firm of White, Helloman and White here and associated in Shreveport with Mr. A. L. Burford of Texarkana, Texas, as counsel for the Louisiana and Arkansas railway.

"Mr. Dawkins received his bachelor of arts degree from Tulane university and his law degree from Louisiana State university. He is a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon national fraternity and Phi Delta Phi legal fraternity. He is a junior member of the law firm of Blanchard, Goldstein, Walker and O'Quin of Shreveport. On the paternal side, his grandparents were the late Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Dawkins, originally of South Carolina, who resided for many years in Farmerville. His maternal grandmother is Mrs. H. W. McLeod of Ruston. His father, outstanding in the legal world, is a federal judge of the western district of Louisiana, and was at one time a member of the Louisiana supreme court.

"Out of town guests for this wedding were Judge and Mrs. Benjamin Dawkins, Misses Jane Dawkins, Peggy Prindle and Louise McLeod, Mr. and Mrs. Victor Davis and Messrs. Gilbert Faulk, James Sparks and King Stubbs of Monroe; Miss Margaret Krumbhaar and Mr. Charles Krumbhaar of Houma; Mr. and Mrs. Welborn Jack, Miss Isabel Woodward and Mr. Whitfield Jack of Shreveport; Mr. and Mrs. John Dubuisson of Opelousas; Mr McLin White of New Orleans; Miss Geralyn Williams, of South Carolina; Mrs. Norman File, of Richmond, Va.; Mrs. Paul Johnson, Dallas, Tex., and Mr. and Mrs. William Neville of McComb, Miss."

Deloney-Hatch

A wedding characterized by beauty and impressive dignity was that of Miss Margaret Hatch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Hatch of Buckner, La., and Mr. Harold L. Deloney of Monroe, formerly of Athens, La., which was beautifully solemnized at 6 o'clock Thursday evening, December 26, at the Methodist church at Buckner, La. The Rev. D. W. Pool, pastor, read the double-ring ceremony in the presence of a large assemblage of relatives and friends.

A screen of Southern smilax, spruces and pines, on which artificial snow was generously sprinkled transformed the scene into one of exquisite natural beauty and formed a lovely background for myriad white tapers in candelabra. Mrs. C. Noble Hatch rendered a program of wedding music which included Engelmann's "Melody of Love" and "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life," by Victor Herbert. Preceding the service, Miss Mary Mhoon Noble sang "I Love You Truly" and "Oh, Promise Me," and Mrs. A. W. Riggs, Jr., of Houston, Texas, sang "Because." Lohengrin's Wedding March heralded the entrance of the wedding party.

The bride entered on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage. She wore a white satin gown, modeled along princess lines, high neck, long sleeves tight from the elbow and finished with small satin buttons, and a flaring skirt which terminated in a long train. Her veil of illusion was arranged in coronet effect with clusters of orange blossoms, and she carried an arm bouquet of bride's roses and valley lilies tied with white satin ribbon, with ends falling to the hem of her gown. The only ornament was a diamond and pearl sunburst pin, a gift from her father to her mother on their wedding day. Miss Carrie Hatch, sister of the bride, and maid of honor, and Mrs. Gardner Young, cousin of the bride, and matron of honor, wore gold satin gowns with trains, and short tulle veils, caught to the head with braided tulle coronets. Their bouquets were of tallisman roses tied with large bows of gold satin ribbon. They wore gold satin slippers.

Miss Louise Deloney of Athens, sister of the groom, Miss Leila Mitchell of Ruston, Miss Sue Henry of Downsville and Miss Elizabeth Taylor of Ruston were bride's maids, and wore satin gowns in purple pansy shades, fashioned along similar lines with short tulle veils and braided tulle coronets. They carried arm bouquets of yellow roses with yellow satin ribbon bows.

Suzanne Ford, dainty little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. D. Ford of Charlieville, as flower girl, wore a frock of yellow satin, made with long full skirt and short puffed sleeves. She carried a French nosegay of old-fashioned garden flowers.

Master Charles Noble, Jr., acted as ring bearer, and wore a tuxedo. He carried the rings on a white satin pillow.

Mr. Joe Deloney, brother of the groom, of Houston, Texas, served as best man, and the ushers were Mr. Larkin Greer of Junction City, Okla., Mr. Baskin Harper of Eros, La., Mr. C. Noble Hatch of Buckner, and Mr. Gardner Young of Monroe.

Mrs. J. M. Hatch, mother of the bride, wore a black lace model with corsage of yellow roses.

The couple left for a wedding trip to New Orleans and other Southern points. The bride traveled in an ensemble of wine wool with seal skin fur. Her hat and accessories were of black.

The bride is the elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Hatch, and granddaughter of the late Frank Hatch of Buckner, La. She is a graduate of Rayville High school, Louisiana Polytechnic institute and a member of Kappa Delta sorority, a member of the Rayville High school faculty and a favorite in society in north Louisiana.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Deloney of Athens, La., and is a graduate of Louisiana Polytechnic institute, Ruston, La., and is a member of Theta Kappa Nu fraternity.

He holds a responsible position in Monroe with the Louisiana Power and Light company.

Warner-Oakland

An impressive candlelight ceremony on New Year's day united in marriage Miss Ruby Oakland, lovely young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Berney Oakland, and Mr. Everett Marshall Warner, son of Mr. A. C. Warner of Natchitoches and nephew of Miss Myrtle Rodgers of this city.

The ceremony took place at four o'clock in the afternoon at the home of the bride's parents on South Grand street in the presence of a few intimate friends and members of the family. Father M. F. Walsh, assistant pastor of St. Matthew's Catholic church, officiated.

The setting for the ceremony was most artistic. Southern smilax formed the background for the myriad pink radiance roses spilling their loveliness from classic shaped urns. Tall, pale pink candles in floor length candelabra pricked the shadowy recesses of the improvised altar.

A short nuptial concert was rendered by the bride's sister, Mrs. Lydia Oakland Nichols, who also sang, in splendid voice, "I Love You Truly."

The bride and bridegroom were attended by Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Coleman.

Amalie Nichols, the beautiful little niece of the bride, wearing an exquisite frock of pink chiffon, carried the rings in the heart of a pink rose bud.

The bride given in marriage by her father, wore a picturesque frock of Mediterranean blue velvet with all accessories of the same beautiful shade. Of charming color contrast was the arm bouquet of pink bride's roses and valley lilies.

An informal reception was held and a delicious confectionery course served to the guests by Mrs. Oakland, assisted by her daughter, Mrs. Nichols.

The bride changed her wedding frock for a smart tailleur and left with Mr. Warner for a honeymoon trip in the east. Following their return, they will be at home to friends in this city, where Mr. Warner is assistant manager of the Monroe hotel.

The bride is a graduate of Neville High school and attended Northeast Center of L. S. U. here and Southwestern Industrial institute in Lafayette.

Mr. Warner is a graduate of Jena High school and attended Southern Methodist university in Dallas and Northeast Center of L. S. U. in Monroe.

Bride-Elect Honored

Outstanding among recent social affairs at Bastrop was the tea given by Mrs. Allen T. Turpin at her home on East Madison street, honoring her niece, Miss Ada Virginia Turpin, whose marriage on Friday, January 3, was a notable social event of the season.

Society was out en masse for this delightful occasion, the setting for which was reminiscent of the Yuletide season. Garlands of bamboo, sprays of mistletoe, great boughs of holly adorned the spacious reception suite, where Mrs. Turpin, Miss Turpin, Mrs. Will E. Turpin and Miss Margaret Cottingham of Pineville, received the guests. Mrs. Allen T. Turpin was becomingly attired in black crepe and chiffon. The honor guest wore a classic model of crushed green velvet. Mrs. Will E. Turpin, mother of the bride-elect, was charming in a black crepe gown trimmed with rhinestone ornaments and Miss Cottingham was most attractive in a starched brown chiffon shot with threads of gold. A beauty spot in the living room that claimed the attention of guests was the wide mantle, banked high with holly and poinsettias. In the midst were stately crimson tapers burning in beautiful antique crystal candelabra, cherished possessions of Mrs. J. D. Turpin, grandmother of Miss Turpin.

The tea table was lovely with its handsome lace cloth and low, oblong plaque of crimson gladioli, maiden hair fern and baby breath, encircled by tall crimson tapers in silver holders. Mrs. Arthur S. McMeans and Mrs. Leland Howard graciously poured tea and coffee from massive silver services placed at either end of the table for those who called during the hours of four to five and Mrs. David Blackshear and Miss Beryl Madison served guests arriving at a later hour. Miss Helen Sproles of Monroe, Miss Dorothy Turpin, Miss Francis Pettiss, Miss Billie Scott, Miss Sue Turpin, Mrs. Jessie B. Rawlinson, Jr., Mrs. Evans Turpin, and Mrs. Smith I. Sims assisted in the courtesies of the dining room and in serving dainty sandwiches, petit fours, embossed mints and nuts.

More than a hundred guests called.

McDaniel-McReynolds

A wedding in which the affectionate interest of many friends is centered and one that came as a complete surprise, is that of Miss Lettie McReynolds, attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. M. McReynolds of this city, and Mr. Grayson McDaniel of Washington, D. C.

The ceremony was performed Saturday morning, January the fourth, at nine o'clock at the McReynolds home on Riverside, with Reverend W. C. Scott of the First Methodist church officiating in the presence of a few intimate friends and immediate members of the family.

The bride wore an advanced spring model of Eleanor blue crepe with gray accessories and carried an arm bouquet of bride's roses and valley lilies.

Immediately following the ceremony, the bride donned a smart navy blue tailleur with a small, close-fitting hat of navy blue, and left with Mr. McDaniel, via the motor route, for their new home in Washington, where Mr. McDaniel is engaged in government business.

Mrs. McDaniel is a popular member of Monroe's younger set and for the past several years has been a member of the Ouachita Parish High school faculty. She obtained her degree from Columbia university, New York City.

The marriage of Miss McReynolds and Mr. McDaniel is the climax of a romance originating in Washington, where Miss McReynolds visited relatives on several occasions.

Gannaway-Patton

Of interest to their many friends is the marriage of Miss Thelma Mae Patton, attractive daughter of Rev. I. A. Patton, of West Monroe, and Mr. John H. Gannaway, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Gannaway, of Russellville, Arkansas.

The wedding was quietly solemnized at the Patton home on Ludwig avenue on the twenty-seventh of December at eight o'clock in the evening, in the presence of relatives and a few close friends, with Rev. Martin Hebert, pastor of the First Methodist church, reading the impressive double ring ceremony.

The bride wore a lovely advanced spring ensemble of aquamarine crepe with harmonizing accessories. She wore a beautiful corsage of pink roses and valley lilies.

Immediately after the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Gannaway left for a short wedding trip and after the first of January, will motor to Chattanooga, Tennessee, where they will make their future home, visiting various points of interest en route. Mr. Gannaway is connected with the Tennessee Valley authority in the capacity of draftsman.

Mrs. Gannaway has been for eight years secretary to W. C. Sally, gravel contractor with offices in the Ouachita National Bank building.

Gossett-Sanderson

Of interest to friends in this city is the following announcement, which appeared in the social department of a Greenville, Miss., newspaper:

"Miss Virginia Sanderson and Mr Harry Gossett, Jr., were united in marriage by Rev. William McMurry Sunday, December 22, at the First Baptist church.

"The attractive bride wore a smart Manhattan model of black and white with harmonizing accessories. Her only attendant was Mrs N. M. McInnis, her sister, while Mr. C. E. Robinson acted as best man.

"Miss Ollie Liebreich, aunt of the groom, sang the beautiful selection, 'I Love You Truly,' accompanied by Miss Lucy Alexander, organist, and Mr. Rex Morgan, violinist.

"Following the ceremony an informal reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gossett, Sr. The couple are now pleasantly located at 207 North Shelby, and their many friends wish them every happiness."

The bridegroom was born and reared in Monroe, and for the past several years has made his home in Greenville, where his parents reside.

Bride Given 'Shower'

Mrs. John Gannaway, a lovely bride of recent date, was the inspiration for a gathering of congenials in the home of Mrs. Ralph White, with Miss Lenora Grower co-hostess.

The bridal theme was accentuated in every detail, with the pleasures of the afternoon climaxing in a "shower" of beautiful gifts of a miscellaneous nature upon Mrs. Gannaway. Jackie White, charming little daughter of the hostess, was privileged to present the gifts, wrapped in colors of vivid hue, to the guest of honor.

A luscious confectionery course was served before departure to Mrs. Gannaway. Mrs. E. R. Lee, Mrs. Frank Martin, Mrs. Ralph Fields, Mrs. Guy Smith, Mrs. Mary Witt, Mrs. Mattie Crow, Mrs. Alexander Wallace, Mrs. Robert Miller, Mrs. George Clark, Misses Chrystine Witt, Lillian Ervin and Emma Patton.

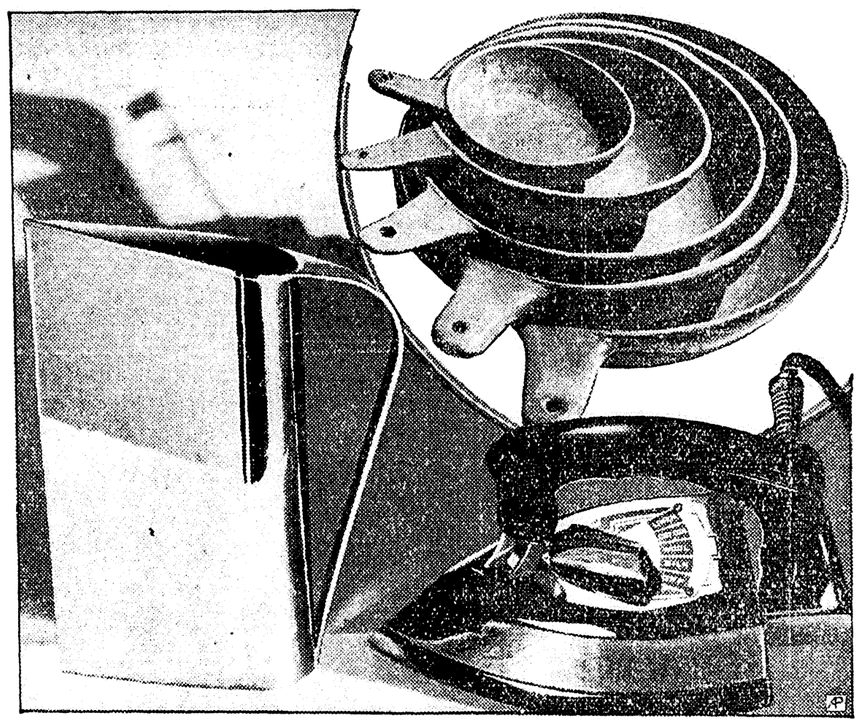
Miss Flanders' friends, acquired during her visits here, will be pleased to learn that she has accepted a position as librarian at Neville High school and will make her home in Monroe for the remainder of the school year.

Sleek New Houseware Has Beauty And Promises To Simplify Work



The Normandie's funnels inspired the modernistic water pitcher above, showing how beauty and utility are combined in the latest household necessities. The frying pans at upper right are of Mexican pottery instead of metal, and they come in all colors. The streamlined electric iron below has a heat control designed for absent-minded housewives. It is gauged to correct ironing heats for linen, cotton, wool and silk. These articles will be shown at the international housewares show in the Chicago Merchandise mart January 6-18.

CHICAGO — (AP) — Frying pans of Mexican pottery and porcelain electric toasters will make their bow to the housewife with a vast company of improved mechanical appliances and gadgets at the first international housewares show in the Merchandise mart here from January 6 to 18.

Designed—with an eye to beauty—to remove hard work from most household duties, these contrivances are to be exhibited by more than 300 manufacturers.

No room of the home has been overlooked in the campaign to make living more enjoyable. The search for attractiveness has been extended even to the most prosaic pots and pans. The pottery and porcelain substitutes for metal cooking dishes will have a prominent place. This group includes coffee makers and grills of decorative pottery suitable for the dining table.

An electric stove which may be left for hours while a meal is being prepared will be demonstrated.

One of the newest wrinkles in air conditioning, a tent-bed, will be shown. It is said to combine all the comforts of sleeping in your own bed with the thrills of a camping expedition. The outfit consists of a tent-like canopy which may be removed easily for access to the bed. Nearby is a separate unit which filters and humidifies the air and assures a constant temperature.

Interest in the show has developed to such an extent that the federal housing administration has ordered a large exhibit space set aside to demonstrate its function as an "intermediary" between merchant and consumer in the buying and selling of major household appliances.

Henry A. Guthrie, chief of the FHA exhibits section, says the government is endeavoring to cooperate further with business men and merchants by having FHA representatives working in department stores as "coordinators."

Their duties, says Guthrie, would be to make both merchant and consumer more cognizant of the help the federal housing administration can render the public in underwriting transactions involving major home furnishing equipment.

Miss Narcisse Brown, popular bride-elect was honored when Miss Eunyce Howard and her sister, Miss Elizabeth Howard, entertained at the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. K. Howard, on the lake with a miscellaneous shower.

The rooms where the guests were received were decorated in keeping with the season in poinsettias, ferns, Cyclamen and other potted plants.

After the serving of refreshments, Miss Brown was escorted into the dining room, where the many exquisite and useful gifts were arranged at the base of a large Christmas tree. When opened and displayed, they presented a most colorful and attractive exhibit.

The guests included Mrs. W. C. Lyon, Mrs. J. E. Brown, 2nd., Mrs. L. P. Thomas, Jr., of Monroe; Mrs. W. D. Brown, Sr., Mrs. C. R. Evans, Mrs. F. H. Schneider, Jr., Mrs. John Rodge, Mrs. G. S. 'Open House' At Herman Masur Home Is Brilliant Occasion

Daughter And Husband Aid In Entertainment

Handsome Drawing Rooms Banked With Exotic Flowers; Elegant Evening Gowns Worn By Feminine Guests

A note of luxuriousness crept into Mr. and Mrs. Herman Masur's "open house" New Year's Eve, when, assisted by their daughter, Mrs. Irvin Shlenker, and Mr. Shlenker, they entertained with one of the most brilliant soirees of a season noted for its unusual brilliancy of entertaining.

The handsome drawing rooms, spacious and high ceilinged, reminiscent of a by gone era, were banked with exotic flowers and alive to the swishing of elegant evening gowns worn by the feminine element. All the gentlemen who called during the receiving hours were in correct evening attire.

Mrs. Masur, moving with characteristic grace among her guests was attired in smart model of gold lame with corsage of talisman roses and valley lilies. Mrs. Shlenker's loveliness was enhanced by a regal gown of white satin, en train. She wore a corsage of crimson radiance roses. Miss Louise Lewald, an attractive visitor in the city, was introduced at this time. She wore a classic gown of white satin, with crimson roses creating a splash of vivid coloring.

The refreshment table, of baronial proportions in the dining room, was developed exclusively in white and silver. Handsome rose point Venise lace covered the board, centered with a classic-shaped white jade epergne overflowing with waxen roses and valley lilies. Tall white tapers in antique silver candelabrum shed a silvery radiance. Silver trays of Russian caviar and open faced sandwiches were continually being refilled by the attendants. In a smaller room a cocktail bar provided a bewildering array of aperitifs, sufficiently varied to satisfy the taste of the most discriminating individual. Trays of luscious hors d'oeuvres were placed for the convenience of the guests.

Dancing being de rigueur, later in the evening, most of the guests, including the hosts of the evening, motored to the Y. M. H. A. or to Lakeside Country club, where the New Year was greeted in typical manner.

Gather At Plantation

New Year's day at the D. Y. Smith plantation home has become traditional with many members of Monroe society, who eagerly anticipate, year after year, the type of hospitality extended on this particular day.

This year's concourse of friends was larger than usual and the dinner and supper served, buffet style, more sumptuous than ever before. The elaborate menu, carefully planned, was provided by the guests, as is the custom each year. The piece de resistance was Virginia baked ham, cold sliced turkey and chicken with all the necessary accompaniments.

The day was one of complete relaxation for the guests, who were privileged to while away the hours as they pleased. Cards were introduced for those who felt so inclined and others, eager for football returns, hovered near the radio.

Friends greeting each other on this delightfully informal occasion were: Mr. and Mrs. Jack Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Haas, Mr. and Mrs. T. O. Bancroft, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Oliver, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Oakley, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Cummings, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Surguine, Mr. and Mrs. Alymer Montgomery, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Black, Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Ewing, Mr. and Mrs. J. Isaacman, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Woods, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Seymour, Mr. and Mrs. S. Girault, Mr. and Mrs. John Theus, Mrs. John Sherrouse, Mr. Aubrey Haas, Mr. and Mrs. Melville Dixon, Mr. Ben Johnson of Shreveport.

Visitor Introduced

Miss Geralyn Williams of Columbia, S. C., the charming house guest of Miss Jane Dawkins during the holidays, was introduced to members of Monroe's younger beau monde at the handsome colonial home of Miss Dawkins' parents, Judge and Mrs. Benjamin Dawkins, on Island drive.

The dignified interior of the Dawkins home offered a charming background for the gay, holiday colors reflected in the urns of gorgeous poinsettias, crimson roses and bright red carnations placed at vantage points.

Miss Dawkins fitted perfectly into the picture in a handsome evening model of wine colored velvet with silver sandals. Miss Williams wore a lovely black chiffon and lace model. Mrs. Dawkins wore an elegant black velvet evening model.

Tall tapers flared on the beautifully appointed buffet supper table in the dining room, florally ornamented with a mound of crimson carnations and silvery baby breath. Silver trays were laden with luscious hors de'oeuvres, canapes open faced sandwiches, salads, fancy cakes and sweetments.

Sharing honors with Miss Williams was Miss Harriet White of Alexandria, whose marriage to Mr. Benjamin Dawkins, Jr., was a brilliant event of New Year's day. Miss White was a lovely figure in Hunter's green crepe with rhinestone embroidery.

Rice Dance

A charming event, conspicuous among the many brilliant affairs of the holiday season, was the dancing party at Lakeside Country club, with Mr. and Mrs. Harry Rice extending courtesies to three hundred or more guests.

Mrs. Rice, wearing a beautiful rhinestone studded crimson crepe evening model, stood with Mr. Rice and their two handsome children, Thomas and Patsy, at the entrance to the ballroom to welcome the guests. Patsy was a lovely little figure in bright blue taffeta with a cunning bouquet of pink sweetheart roses.

The scene on the ballroom floor was one of scintillating beauty against the background of holly, pine and cedar and myriad twinkling colored lights. The evening ended in a blaze of glory, with the dancers moving over the floor in a perfect maze of confetti and serpentine thrown from the orchestral balcony. The favors were grotesque looking hats and hundreds of noise makers of every description.

Iced frappe was served from a beautifully appointed refreshment table throughout the evening.

Club Entertained

Crimson roses and flaming poinsettias graced the reception suite of Mrs. Louis Rinehart's home in West Monroe Friday afternoon, when she welcomed members of her bridge club and extended many charming courtesies. Crimson linens covered the card tables and score cards reminiscent of the holiday season were distributed.

Mrs. Clark Faulk received the high score trophy and Mrs. Samuel Humphries claimed the consolation gift. Mrs Ray Buce received the guest trophy.

A delectable salad course was served to Mesdames Wheeler Mitchell, Ernest Eaves, Fred Mitchell, Randle, Harvey McDonald, Will Mitchell, Sam Humphries, Fred Grant, Clifton Mize, Herbert Rinehart and Ray Buce.

Birthday Celebrated

The new year was welcomed in typical, exuberant manner in the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Brownlee, where their daughter, Miss Grace Brownlee, entertained a few intimates in commemoration of her fourteenth birthday anniversary.

The pleasures of the evening were concluded with the cutting of the handsome birthday cake following the joyous welcome of the new year.

Delicious confections were served to Peggy Moffett, Hazel Crye, Frances Moudy, Gladys Joy Aulds, Louise Hawkins, Jack Smith, Lamar Boulware, Jack Holder, James Salley, J. W. Landrum, Arthur Cruikshank and Bill Gates.

Jinx On Hollywood's 'Kid Stars' Takes Beating; Many Grow Up Without Losing Screen Appeal

Among the "younger generation" of screen players are many who have proved and are proving there's not much to that "jinx" on child actors. Helen Mack, at left, is seen as she appeared in pictures at eight years old and as she is today, a leading woman. In the center is Mary Kornman, star of "Our Gang" comedies, who turned her back on a promising adult screen career when she married. And at right is Anita Louise, as a child actress, and as she appears now, a grown-up with a rapidly growing list of screen credits.

By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD.—One of those things one hears around Hollywood is that child actors never, never grow up to be actors.

"Ineed?" is the response today of a growing group of former child actors who are making their way in pictures.

"Look at Madge Evans—and Lila Lee," the youngsters say, pointing to the more obvious examples; Madge who was a child star in pictures and returned to become a popular leading woman; Lila, who grew up to play leading lady to such stars as Thomas Meighan and Antonio Moreno.

"And then," they add, "take a look at the rest of us!"

And taking a look "at the rest of us," you will find some good examples to give the lie to the old Hollywood axiom.

Helen Mack, for instance. As a child Helen played in silent pictures, in more or less important roles, and even was co-starred, in a picture called "The Little Red Schoolhouse," with a little boy who today is that popular juvenile, Tom Brown.

When Helen had "grown up" and returned to pictures after stage experience, she soon learned to keep mum about her childhood movie-acting. The first time she mentioned it, proudly, a producer told her, "Well, we won't hold that against you!"

And here is Johnny Downs, a bright hope at Paramount, who bridged the gap from "Our Gang" to feature films, and surmounted the "awkward age" by a vaudeville tour which ripened him for further stage work and a return to pictures. Mary Kornman, his former leading lady in "Our Gang," played in several pictures as a grown-up, and retired when she married Leo Tovar, cameraman.

Anita Louise, who began as a child actress, accomplished the unusual when she remained in pictures throughout the "awkward age" and was graduated from "little girls" to "very young ladies" without leaving the screen.

Anne Shirley is another. Little "Dawn O'Day," as she was known, had been struggling for film recognition almost since infancy when last year her big opportunity came in the lead of "Anne of Green Gables." Like Anita Louise, she never left the screen.

Supporting a child star, Jane Withers, in "Gentle Julia" are two former child players. One is Tom Brown, the other is Maurice Murphy, who among other child roles played that of the young Ronald Colman in "Beau Geste." He now has a 20th Century-Fox contract.

Ben Alexander (the boy in "Hearts of the World" and many other silent films) likewise conquered the bugahood of child stardom and has played in many talkies, notably "All Quiet On the Western Front."

While Jackie Coogan, Chaplin's wonder boy of "The Kid," made no great impression as an adult actor in westerns, and Baby Peggy Montgomery has not yet made the grade as an ingenue, the future of Shirley Temple, Jane Withers, Freddie Bartholomew and other child scintillants of today is not fore-ordained failure.

Family Separated 34 Years Is Reunited At Christmas

Around the family fireside of Alonzo Mayberry in Baskin, on Christmas day, gathered an unusually happy family group. They comprised Mrs. Josephine Mayberry, slightly past 70, and her children Bob, James, Perry, Myrtle, Alonzo and Lucy. They came from their homes scattered over several states and the assemblage assumed unusual interest in that the members of the family had lost sight of each other for decades. This was the first time in 34 years that they had all assembled together at one time.

Only one cloud on the landscape marred the pleasure of the family reunion. That was the fact that Bessie, the youngest sister of the family, had not as yet been located. She was believed to reside in Texas but the city or town was unknown and even her present name, for she is understood to have married, is not known to her mother or brothers and sisters. Other members of the family having now been all located, an united effort is to be exerted to discover the whereabouts of the missing member.

The family history of the little group, possessed of more than usual human interest, started back in Van Buren, Mo., about 50 years ago when Miss Josephine Chitwood became the wife of Marmaduke Mayberry. In the course of time, five children were born. They were Bob, James, Alonzo, Myrtle and Perry.

When Perry was but eight months of age, his father met instant death when deer hunting. Thereafter began the struggle for financial existence of the mother, Mrs. Mayberry. She managed by frugalty and long hours filled with toil to keep her little brood together. In 1897, she met and married her second husband who was Henry Mosier. To them were born two children, Lucy and Bessie.

When his two children were still in early infancy, Henry Mosier suddenly disappeared and was heard of no more for years. Mrs. Mosier, unable to support her large family, was forced to place them in an orphanage in St. Louis. But the two oldest boys refused to be thus sent away. They were Bob, 14, and James, 12, and to escape being placed in the children's home with their brothers and sisters, they fled ultimately to Louisiana where they have resided ever since.

It is said that the children were placed in the orphanage with records stating that their mother had died. Time passed and the children became separated. Myrtle was adopted by Fred Johannaber of Marthasville, Mo.; Perry was given a home and made legal heir of A. Sidwell of Bowling Green, Mo.; Alonzo was adopted by M. E. Quick of Keytesville, Mo., while Lucy was raised by a nephew of Judge Allen Clark, well-known Missouri justice.

Lucy, who is now Mrs. L. Koch of Schiller Park, Ill., was possessed of an unusually inquiring mind. When she became partly grown, she made a careful check-up of her early life at the orphanage and there she discovered a slight clue which, through much correspondence, resulted in the location of an uncle, a brother of her father, William Mosier of Watson, Ark. Through him in the year 1925, she learned that she had brothers and sisters and again in 1930, she got in touch for the first time with another uncle, John Mosier of Winona, Mo. He it was who told her that she still had a mother living and through his aid, the mother was located.

Many letters passed through the mails to many cities and towns in order that the brothers and sisters could be reunited. Ultimately all were located but Bessie, even the father, Henry Mosier, who had deserted his family, having been found in Kentucky.

Bessie is believed to have been taken by some family in Texas, to have grown up and married, and to have then dropped out of sight more completely than did the other members of the family.

From Missouri, Arkansas and towns of Louisiana the family came to Baskin for the family reunion and the most joyous Christmas in the history of the group was had.

Lucy Mosier, now Mrs. L. Koch of Shiller Park, Ill., is still determined to locate the long lost sister. She is asking that anyone who may read this story who chances to have any information that may lead to the discovery of Bessie's whereabouts, communicate with her at once. And out of Texas somewhere she is confident that her sister will be located and the family group made complete.

A musical program under the direction of Mrs. V. R. Thompson was given at the Methodist church recently.

Miss Mary Post is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Post, at Slidell.

Miss Georgia Rose Rountree recently entertained the members of the high school set with a lovely dancing party at her home on Thursday evening.

Miss Agnes Hood, of Clarksdale, Miss., spent a recent week-end with Mr. and Mrs. R. N. Ware.

Mr. C. E. Speed, who has been a patient in a Vicksburg infirmary for three weeks has returned to his home near Tallulah.

Mrs. C. B. Claughton and daughter, Miss Peggy Claughton, spent the Christmas holidays with relatives in Centerville, Miss.

Members of the Young People's division of the Methodist church were recently complimented at a banquet in the community room of the church. The spacious hall was beautifully decorated with Christmas greens and red berries, festoons of red and green hung with balloons giving an added festive note. A realistic manger scene arranged on the piano was attractive and appreciated. Tall red tapers, miniature Christmas trees and poinsettias were used for table decorations.

Mrs. C. K. Smith was charming as mistress of ceremonies, Mrs. Myles Hopkins contributed several piano selections and Mrs. Ora Spinks, director of young people's work of the church, made a talk. Amusing impromptu talks by a number of the college students added much merriment to the occasion. Among those in attendance were Sue Fairly, Julia Williams, Louise Freeman, Mary Pinney Hopkins, Helen Massey, Jane Smith, Mabel Claire Lancaster, Charlotte and Laura Sevier, Emily and Regina Bethea, Alice Ware, Elizabeth and Mildred Piper, Dorothy Ruth Wixson, Naomi Alexander, Virginia Thompson, Ruth Smith, Jean French, of Chicago, Billy Pierce, James Wades, Charles Brown, Ralph Linton, Frank and Robert Graves, Charles and Cecil Piper, Edgar Lancaster, James Freeman, Ralph Holloway, Tom Barber, James Spinks, Jimmie Whitehead, Mrs. Spinks, Mrs. Hopkins and Mrs. C. K. Smith.

Among the very delightful parties of the holiday season was that given at the Beck club building by Rev. Skardon D'Aubert, complimentary to his young friends of the high school set. Dancing was enjoyed throughout the evening. Delicious refreshments were served. A surprise feature of the event was a miscellaneous shower given the popular young rector, who will leave Tallulah soon to make his home in Birmingham. Those in attendance were Marguerite McDonald and E. B. Towne, Sue Fairly and Tom Barber, Helen Margaret Yerger and Hunter Coad, Georgia Rose Rountree and Lewis Nettles, Carolyn Sevier and Wesley Whitfield, Carolyn Coad and Will Harvey, Alice Ware and David Currie, Naomi Alexander and Charles Brown, Harry Holt, Ralph Taylor, William Frederick and Thomas Howard Gandy, George and John B. Mr. and Mrs. R. N. Ware were among the many delightful hosts of Christmas week when they held open house on Christmas afternoon from four to six. A number of friends enjoyed their charming hospitality.

Mr. Ed Shamblin has returned to his home here after spending several days in a Vicksburg sanitarium, where he received treatment for injuries sustained in an automobile accident. Miss Ratcliff, of Rayville, who was also injured in the accident is still a patient in the sanitarium, where she is reported to be improving.

Mrs. R. L. Baily and her young sons spent a recent week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Pierce in Bunkie.

A very lovely tea dance, sponsored by Mr. and Mrs. R. N. Ware for members of the younger set, was given at the Community club recently. Dancing was enjoyed in the beautifully decorated ball room from three to six, when the guests were invited in to tea. Santa Claus driving his reindeer over a mirror lake with a flock of penguins nearby formed the center piece for the tea table, which was made more attractive by tall crimson tapers. Delicious punch, sandwiches and Christmas candies were served. Over forty young people were in attendance.

Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Phillips spent the Christmas vacation with relatives in Monroe and Houston, Texas.

Miss Elizabeth Bettis entertained with a delightful party complimentary to her house guest, Miss Clara Frances Barrett of Vicksburg, Miss. Attractive Christmas decorations in the reception rooms added to the pleasure of the occasion. Bridge games were enjoyed. Mrs. George C. Purvis received the high score prize. For the cut prize, Miss Georgette Ziegler was presented with hose. Mrs. S. B. Bettis, assisted by Miss Frances Bettis, served a delicious plate lunch at the conclusion of the games to the guests: Miss Clara Frances Barrett, Miss Georgette Ziegler, Mrs. George Purvis, Misses Elizabeth and Eula Gilfoil, Mrs. Jim Gilfoil III, Miss Dorothy Kayser, Miss Elizabeth Holt, Miss Dorothy Fairly, Miss Vertner Sevier and Miss Mercedes Hester.

'Night At The Opera' Stars Marx Brothers At Paramount

Comedians Score In New Film

Riotous Picture Termed Best Brothers Have Ever Produced

HERALDED as the funniest picture to come out of Hollywood in years, "A Night at the Opera" plays today and tomorrow at the Paramount theater with the world-renowned Marx Brothers, Groucho, Chico and Harpo, cast in three of the most uproarious characterizations ever devied for any trio of comics either on stage or screen.

The new picture represents a departure for the celebrated Kings of Laughter inasmuch as it does not depend alone on madcap antics and insane gags but tells a straight, credible story enlivened by musical interludes and an engaging romance between Kitty Carlisle, heroine of several Bing Crosby musicals, and Allan Jones, who made his film debut with Jean Harlow in "Reckless."

The story of "A Night at the Opera" was written by James Kevin McGuinness, with the screen play the work of the famed humorists, George Kaufman and Morrie Ryskind. Kaufman was responsible for "Cocoanuts," an earlier Marx Brothers hit, and collaborated on such outstanding successes as "Once in a Lifetime" and "Dinner at Eight." With Ryskind he also wrote "Of Thee I Sing" and "Let 'Em Eat Cake."

O special interest in connection with "A Night at the Opera" is the fact that it has the unique distinction of being the first motion picture to be previewed on the stage. Before a foot of film was shot the production was taken out on a legitimate stage tour with the Marx Brothers playing the roles in which they are seen on the screen. As a result the story was given a preview public test and work was begun at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios only after it was certain that every detail had been proved of entertainment value to varied audiences.

The principal locales of "A Night at the Opera" are Italy, an ocean liner and a New York opera house. Groucho, Chico and Harpo, constituting themselves self-appointed managers, take over the destinies of a pair of songbirds, Kitty Carlisle and Allan Jones. Picking on Walter King, whose frantic jealousy almost wrecks the romance between Miss Carlisle and Jones, they make hash of the performance in the opera, appearing one minute on the stage, next among the audience. They create a panic which breaks out, but taking the center of stage for merry mad moments they quiet the audience's fear with their riotous antics.

In addition to the principals the cast of "A Night at the Opera" features Siegfried Rumann, Margaret Dumont, who was leading lady in the stage version of "Cocoanuts," Edward Keane and Robert Emmet O'Connor. The picture was filmed under the direction of Sam Wood, who has a score or more of successful comedies to his credit.

Scenes From Film Attractions At Local Theaters This Week

Groucho, Chico and Harpo Marx run wild in their latest comedy romance "A Night at the Opera," the attraction at the Paramount theater today and Monday. An ocean liner provides the setting for most of the fun, and you never can tell what the trio will do next.

Frank Buck wins the confidence and affection of one of the comedians in his new picture of excitement and adventure, "Fang and Claw," the attraction at the Capitol theater today and Monday.

Clark Gable and Jean Harlow, who are co-starred with Wallace Beery in the spectacular melodrama, "China Seas," the attraction playing at the Capitol theater Thursday and Friday. It's a thrill story of romance and adventure in the Far East.

She's back again . . . with that flashing smile . . . that style that's all her own. Myrna Loy and Spencer Tracy co-starred in the comedy romance "Whipsaw," the attraction at the Paramount theater Tuesday and Wednesday.

Brian Aherne, Frank Morgan, Frank Conroy and Joan Crawford in a scene from her latest and best romance, "I Live My Life," the feature playing at the Capitol Tuesday and Wednesday. Here's Miss Crawford at her best and a story that no one can help but enjoy.

Screen Life In Hollywood

By Hubbard Keavy

HOLLYWOOD.—Walter (d'Artagnan) Abel never was interested in politics during his 15 years on the stage. He voted, surely, and paid some attention to national politics, but he never thought he'd have to be a politician.

But to get the most out of Hollywood—unfortunately, says Walter—you've got to play politics as it is played here.

This talk about movie ways and movie politics really started with a discussion about a suit of clothes. Or, rather, several suits of clothes. Abel said he didn't expect to enjoy his afternoon, because he had to spend it in a tailor shop getting seven suits of clothes to wear in a motion picture, "The Indestructible Mrs. Green."

"I've got to go to a certain tailor, the most expensive tailor in town," he explained. "Why? Because everybody says I've got to buy my clothes from this man. They tell me I won't be dressed unless he dresses me. That it's part of the game to wear the finest, most expensive clothes one can get."

Staying In Gear

An "inexpensive" suit made in the particular shop Abel spoke of is $135. (Imported stuff and all wool but the buttons.) "Better" suits are $175 to $225. Virtually every actor of prominence (and many who can't afford such clothes) buys from this tailor because he is expected to do so.

"I think it's ridiculous," Abel went on, "but what can I, a beginner in this business, do about it? Nothing."

I suggested to Abel that he was learning what it means and what it costs to "put up a front" in Hollywood.

"I wouldn't call it putting up a front," he said. "Rather, it is playing politics. The whole motion picture system is a machine and you've got to be in gear with it to succeed. I was advised to buy an expensive car, but I didn't. I bought transportation. I was advised to get a big house in Beverly Hills. You know, one of those barn-like places on a palm-lined street. But I didn't. I got a nice place in a nearby suburb. I was advised to go to a certain cafe—to be seen by the right people. Well, Mrs. Abel and I went one night—one only—and we felt like a couple of country cousins seeing the sights.

'Hand-Me-Down' Guy

"In New York, it doesn't make any difference where you live or what kind of clothes you wear or with whom you are seen. It's what you are that counts.

"You can't, in any way, compare the movies and the stage. The mediums are different, the work is different and the people are different. Mind you, I like the movies and I'm making more money here than I ever did before. I think standards are just as high. But I don't like to pay $150 for a suit of clothes.

"However, I hope this 'hand-me-down' guy will get used to this 'custom-made' town."

Abel made his debut as d'Artagnan in "The Three Musketeers" and, as a result of that performance, seems destined for a long run in Hollywood.

Jack Benny and Una Merkel form the screen's newest team in the comedy drama "It's In the Air," which comes to the Paramount theater Thursday and Friday. Benny portrays the role of a Broadway "chiseler." Ted Healy, Nat Pendleton and Mary Carlisle are in the notable supporting cast.

Notes On Life In Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD. — Figuratively, Joe Penner is like the hungry vaudevillan who ate his trained duck.

There isn't a duck in the Joe Penner home. Nor on the Penner grounds. There are some parrots, in modest white brie-a-brac, in the living room, but no other fowl of any kind. Perhaps Joe owns some white duck pants, but there isn't any special reminder of the Goo-Goo that Joe made famous and that helped make Joe a celebrity.

Joe hopes he has said a final goodbye to the duck gag. He feels that ducks have done him a good turn and he is properly grateful.

"But a guy can't get by forever with a duck and trick clothes," says Joe. "Trick clothes and 'prop' gags limit a guy. In the first picture ('College Rhythm') we had 2,000 ducks. What can you do to top that? You'd have to have 5,000 ducks."

The Duck's Farewell

Goo-Goo has been retired and the trick clothes and the funny hat have been laid away. In his second film (the forthcoming "Collegiate"), Joe wears everyday street clothes and, in the very final scene only, does a duck appear. That scene is the duck's farewell.

Penner has settled down in Hollywood and he hopes to become an actor. An actor of parts, that is, who will be given an opportunity to do pathos as well as comedy. As part of his campaign to get rid of the "props" and their associations, Penner gave up the radio. He feels that after an absence of a year, with only occasional ether appearances as a "guest artist," he will be able to return in a new and different characterization.

When a Penner settles down, he does it right. Joe didn't want to build a house right off, because he wasn't quite sure what he wanted. He has been living in trunks and hotels for a good many years and he says he wants to "live around" in houses before he picks a permanent one.

Acre At Palm Springs

So he rented a furnished house and when Joe considered the rental of $550 a month, it seemed like a good buy. But after he moved in, he didn't like the furniture. He took out everything. He bought his own furnishings and drapes and rugs—between $7,000 and $8,000 worth of them.

"It sounds silly, I guess, to say that I rented a furnished house and then threw out the furniture," says Joe, a little sheepishly. "But all this stuff will fit into the place I plan to build some day."

The nearby desert resort of Palm Springs, so popular with the movie crowd lately, has caught the fancy of the Penners. Joe thinks that within a few years, it will be the country's big winter resort.

He bought an acre of ground on this desert oasis, where he is starting soon to build a "little place for the winter months." Of course, it's cheaper to rent at Palm Springs, but Joe has the investment possibilities in mind.

Frank Buck Picture Has New Thrills

'Fang And Claw' Opens Two-Day Run At Capitol Theater Today

"BRING 'Em Back Alive" Frank Buck, whose name has become a household word, has recently returned from an expedition to the Malay peninsula and northern India, bringing with him a new bagful of cinematic thrills. From the more than twenty miles of film exposed he has produced his third feature picture, "Fang and Claw," said to be not only a worthy successor to his two preceding ones, but also radically different in many respects. It will be shown at the Capital theater today.

"Fang and Claw" evokes thrills by a rapid succession of hair-breadth escapes and breath-taking struggles between man and animal, both in pursuit and capture.

One of the highlights is a hair-raising pursuit of a native by a ravenously hungry man-eating tiger, an enormous beast that lurked in the wild fastnesses of the Sakai country. Stalking its unsuspecting prey through the dense jungle, the great famished cat follows the native to his native hut, and it is here that the excitement mounts in a furious crescendo. As the tiger bounds through the open door, the man dives out through the window, and the beast follows him. The native races madly for a nearby tree, the tiger close behind him, a mighty spring misses its mark by a matter of inches, and the frightened native climbs the tree in panic with almost superhuman agility. That the tiger follows him up the trunk and forces him out to the very tip of one of the limbs goes without saying. The climax comes when Frank Buck interferes and provides what is said to be a distinct surprise.

Another tiger episode depicts the capture of the largest of the species ever seen in the Malay country. A giant crocodile is caught in a highly novel manner, its jaws being tied by Buck, while it is still in its native element.

Wild monkeys of many different species are caught in various ways, and a large herd of rare antelope is added to Buck's unique collection by a mass set-up of snares. "Fang and Claw" is said to contain a plentiful number of comedy sequences, several of which depict the antics of those natural clowns, the monkeys, and the honey bears.

Two enormous pythons, each about twenty-eight feet in length, are captured under difficult conditions, one of them being caught by Buck barehanded. This reptile had struck at one of the natives, but fortunately, the strike was short. Otherwise it would have been the man's end, for pythons wrap themselves around a man or a beast with surprising speed, crushing out life in a period of less than two minutes.

In what is still another suspenseful episode, a tiger stalks and springs upon a baby rhinoceros that has strayed away from its mother. Were it not for the timely arrival of Buck, the baby rhino would not have lasted long, despite the fact that it was or what is known as the armor-plated variety.

More than two thousand animals and five thousand birds were captured by Buck on his recent expedition and brought back to America for various zoological collections. The most interesting among them furnish the action for "Fang and Claw," produced by the Van Buren corporation, and released by RKO Radio.

LOCAL MEN WIN TRIP TO NORGE FACTORIES

As a result of exceeding the sales quotas established by Norge corporation, Otto Passman, C. C. Smith and John Bateman of the Passman Equipment company, local Norge dealers, have won trips to the Norge factories.

Mr. Passman reports that he and his men will make the trip along with over one hundred other successful Norge merchandisers from the southwest on a special Norge train which will leave New Orleans today.

These men will assemble in Chicago with other Norge groups and will visit the plants of the Norge division, Borg-Warner corporation in Muskegon and Detroit, Mich.

Mr. Passman reports that Norge has recently expended over $1,000,000 in increased production facilities to take care of the anticipated 1936 demand for Norge products.

While in Detroit these men will be given first hand information on Norge marketing studies and merchandising plans for 1936.

Mr. Passman attributes his success in winning this fine trip to the increasing preference for Norge home appliance in Monroe and vicinity.

COTTON BREEDING TESTS MADE AT FARM STATIONS

FERRIDAY, La., Jan. 4.—(Special)—John Cotton, recently named associate cotton agronomist for the U. S. government department of agriculture with headquarters in Baton Rouge, is making a cotton breeding experiment at the St. Joseph and Calhoun experimental stations. He is making a special study of cotton breeding under the conditions which prevail in these sections. He is a graduate of Louisiana State university and his thesis was "Cotton Spacing in Louisiana." During his college days he served as assistant to Dr. H. B. Brown, chief agronomist of the U. S. department of agriculture at L. S. U.

Most of Germany's foreign students attend the University of Berlin and the University of Munich.

DOCTORS WILL SPEAK BEFORE MEN'S CLUB

Talks by prominent Monroe physicians, illustrated by moving pictures, will be the feature of the regular monthly meeting of the Men's club of the First Methodist church Monday night at the church annex. The meeting will begin with a supper served at 6:30 o'clock. Dr. C. P. Gray and Dr. John G. Snelling, Jr., will be the speakers.

Dr. Gray will talk on "A Century of Progress in Medicine." Dr. Snelling's subject will be, "Cancer as Concerning the Public." The motion pictures, made especially to illustrate the lectures, will deal with the subjects, "Cancer, Its Life History and Practical Measures for Its Control," and "Fight Cancer With Knowledge." An invitation to all men of the city to attend the meeting has been extended by officers of the Methodist Men's club.

The bureau of biological survey of the federal department of agriculture has 14 wildlife refuges in Florida.

CHAPTER 1

A slender girl with a charming, eager face and rich chestnut hair took her traveling case from a taxi driver and stood holding it until the rattle of the cab died down the quiet street. She thought, looking up at the big, weather-beaten old building in front of her that it looked very weary, almost as though it were ready to give up.

There was nothing familiar about it. Nothing even faintly resembling the house of which she had dreamed since she was a child.

She had asked the cab driver, puzzled, "You're sure this is the Cameron home? Mrs. Willard P. Cameron, you know?"

"Yes, miss. I know the place well."

And so Dana Westbrook had climbed out. And now she stood staring up at the old house supported by immense Corinthian columns that had once been white and now were only a dirty gray.

Soberly, she picked up her light case and opened the old iron gate, sagging dejectedly on rusty hinges. And then up the long, brick walk were somehow not without warmth.

"You're Aunt Ellen!" Dana exclaimed. "I should have known, because you are exactly as my mother described you to me—only—"

"Only older." The shy blue eyes smiled understandingly.

"It doesn't matter if you're sweet," Dana said quickly.

"Thank you, child. There, I hear your grandmother's car."

Dana heard it, too. It was evidently old, just as everything else around here was. The automobile was making a great deal of noise as it came up the drive.

Dana's heart was suddenly beating much faster. She thought of something her mother had said to her which she had never forgotten. "Most people have been frightened by your grandmother, for she is rather a stern person, Dana. But I was never really frightened until—until the last. Because I knew she loved me very much."

Dana had puzzled over the words "until the last." It was not until she herself was almost grown that she had learned what her mother meant.

It was this knowledge and the realization that she was now about to face the stern old lady that caused the blood to mount swiftly to Dana's face and her heart to beat wildly. In that moment she wished unhappily that she had kept the ocean between herself and this queer old house.

There were hard, firm steps outside. Her aunt rushed to the door.

"Sarah!" began a harsh voice.

"Sarah's busy, Tuesday's wash day, you know, Agatha," Aunt Ellen said apologetically. "I opened the door for—for Dana—" Her voice broke in excitment.

Dana had risen. She walked courageously toward the newcomer, none of her uncertainty and unhappiness showing in her eyes.

The old lady who had entered the big, gloomy room had almost white hair, aquiline features and dark eyes that burned in a thin face. She stared down at Dana fiercely, terribly.

"I'm very glad you've come," she said, but made no move forward.

"The child has come a long way and is very tired," Aunt Ellen said in a gentle, troubled tone.

"Yes, yes," muttered the old lady. "She must want to go to her room."

Grandmother Cameron sank into a chair, heavily, her brooding eyes fixed on a familiar pattern of the rug. She said, without lifting her eyes, "You must excuse me for not accompanying you to your room, but I, too, am very tired."

"It isn't necessary," Dana said through stiff lips. "If you'll only tell me where to go."

"Ellen, call Sarah."

Her sister flew to pull a long rope that was concealed behind the faded draperies between the hall and living room. She pulled it twice in her agitation.

An old colored woman answered the summons, grumbling as she came; "Yes'm, I'm coming, Miss Ellen. Fas as ever my laigs can ca'y me."

She stopped at the sight of Dana. "Fo' de lawd," she whispered, her face graying. "Fo' de lawd!"

"Sarah!" the harsh tones of Grandmother Cameron recalled her. "This is Miss Dana. You have prepared her room?"

"Oh, yes'm." Knotted black hands released the apron corner they had been clutching. Sarah lifted Dana's traveling bag and started up the stair.

The girl followed, conscious of pitying blue eyes and burning dark ones watching her as she went up the wide, walnut stair.

The old colored woman led the way down a long hall on the upper floor. The walk seemed endless. And then, suddenly, a door was flung wide.

Sarah whispered: "Go on in, honey chile. You're the spit' image of yore pore young ma who slep' in this room. It ain't never been opened till today since the night she run away with Marse Dana, lovin' him so and misserble married Marse John. I dunno what come over yore grandma, 'lawn it to be open for you. Mebbe she's gettin' soft in her old age."

"Thank you, Sarah," Dana said, a lump in her throat. The door closed. She could hear the old servant shuffling down the hall.

CHAPTER II

Dana was fighting for self-control as she crossed to a deep window and looked down at the scene below. The gray day had turned darker, and now a light rain was falling, adding to the dreary appearance of the garden which stretched some distance away until it ran into an old brick wall.

That unkempt area, deep in tangled growth, had once been a lovely garden. It was there Dana's mother had moved as a young and beautiful girl, loved and loving. It was there she had carried her bitterness and hurt as a desperately unhappy young wife after she had married "for security" to please her mother. And it was through the garden gate at the far end that she had fled two years later, leaving a tiny baby in this very room.

Dana's father had told her the whole story when she was 16.

"I couldn't have you hear from anyone that your mother was not a good woman, Dana, dear," he had said. "She was all that was pure and lovely. We loved each other so very much. We were young, and your mother was desperately unhappy. We felt there was nothing else to do. We were married as soon as John Wallace got the divorce, and a year later you came to bless our lives."

"What became of my sister?" Dana had questioned, then.

He had answered gently. "Your mother felt the baby would be a comfort to your grandmother, who had closed her home against us. And so your mother lived for 12 years—until she died, Dana—never hearing anything from your little sister at home."

Dana thought now: "My grandmother didn't seem glad to see me. Maybe she is cruel. Maybe this is her revenge, bringing me back to live with unhappy memories."

She shook herself out of the somber mood and looked around her.

The room was beautiful. The rose draperies about the canopied bed were only slightly faded. The furnishings were graceful Colonial pieces of an exquisite satiny wood. Her mother's desk, inlaid in a classical design, was in one corner. The rug was thick and luxurious, of a beautiful medallion pattern. A few choice prints and dainty floral pictures were on the wall.

Dana's eyes fell on a miniature on the dressing table and she went over, lifting it and staring down at it with misty eyes. This slender, radiant girl, dressed in the quaint style of another era, was her mother.

"How lovely she was," Dana whispered. Compassion flowed through her. How that stern old woman downstairs must have suffered when her beautiful daughter passed from her life forever.

"But it was wrong to bring me here," Dana thought rebelliously, "if she can't forgive me for being my father's child and looking like my mother."

There was a knock at the door.

"Come in," Dana said, replacing the miniature on the dressing table.

The door opened. A slender girl with enormous, un-smiling dark eyes came in. She had a dark, curly bob, and she wore a blue and white frock, cut with uncompromising severity.

"She looks all of one piece," Dana thought. "A mighty sober piece."

And then came realization. This was Nancy, her half-sister.

"I came to offer the family felicitations," the dark-haired girl said slowly. "I gathered grandmother had let you in for a rather rough time."

"Well," Dana laughed a little shakily, "it was not exactly what you'd call meeting me with a brass band. Won't you sit down?"

The two sat stiffly in chairs, staring at each other.

"Too bad you had to come at all," Nancy said. "This isn't exactly a jolly house to live in. If I'd ever had a chance to live anywhere else—" She stopped, as though realizing she had been too free, too friendly. Her dark eyes, which had held a hint of sympathy before, were suddenly remote.

"There wasn't any other place for me," Dana said. "I had given my father a promise that I'd write my grandmother if anything ever happened to him. When he died three years ago, I was at St. Cecile's. I wrote grandmother, but I did not know until after I was graduated that she had been paying my tuition since then, and that she had sent money for me to come here when I was through school."

"She probably put a second mortgage on something to do it," Nancy said bluntly. When Dana flushed unhappily, she added, "Oh, don't mind that. We're so used to them, an extra one couldn't make any difference. Besides, we live in the past—in the grandiose dreams of what used to be. Past glory should satisfy anybody with a drop of Cameron blood in their veins. We mustn't forget that noble Scottish Camerons spilled their blood all over foreign battlefields and our great-grandfather was a dauntless southern leader.

"We mustn't forget," Nancy continued mockingly, "that until 25 years from which many bricks were conspicuously missing.

A moment later she pulled down the ancient bronze bell. A hollow peal, which she knew must be resounding hideously within, greeted her.

The door was opened. Very little at first, as though by a cautious hand. And then wider, permitting the face of an old lady to peep through. She had gray hair, drawn back neatly, and blue eyes that held a hint of surprise in them.

Impetuously, Dana put down her traveling case. There was a joyous note in her voice: "You're Grandmother Cameron aren't you?"

"Goodness me, no!" The old lady's voice rose in protest. Then, "Why you must be Dana. Come in, my dear. And where is your grandmother? She went to meet you."

"I don't know. You see I hadn't the faintest idea what my grandmother looked like. No one seemed to be looking for me, and so I got a cab and came out."

"Yes, of course," said the old lady, her eyes darting anxiously from Dana to the door. "I'm afraid, though, your grandmother won't like it. You see, in our family we always meet trains. And it is rather a reflection on us that you should come home for the first time in twenty-odd years in a cab."

"For the first time," Dana corrected her, her eyes dancing in amusement.

"Yes, yes. But you are so like your mother—" Suddenly she placed her arms around the young girl, strained her close, and gave her a quick bird-like peck on each cheek. Kisses that

EVERY YEAR

TRAFFIC BECOMES MORE AND MORE CONGESTED

There are more motor cars and trucks on the streets and highways today than ever before . . . manufacturers are making cars speedier than ever before . . . so a driver must be especially vigilant if he is to avoid having or causing an accident.

If you are not acquainted with traffic regulations you should find out more about them. If your car won't stop as soon as it should you should have your brakes repaired or new ones put in. If your tires are worn out and liable to blow out they should be replaced. You owe it to yourself and the driver of every other car to do these things.

ADULT SCHOOLS TO START SOON

Work Will Be Given To 319 Unemployed Teachers In This Area

Adult education schools will resume sessions in the fifth congressional district this week as WPA projects, it was announced by A. P. Lassiter, district director. This will give work to 319 unemployed teachers located in the 14 parishes of north Louisiana that comprise the fifth district. Fourteen supervisors will also find employment.

Supervisors named for the various parishes were announced Saturday by Mr. Lassiter as follows: Ouachita parish, J. L. Heath, Jr., of Calhoun; East Carroll parish, Mrs. Vera Cohron, of Lake Providence; West Carroll, Mrs. Lillian O'Connell, of Oak Grove; Concordia parish, Mrs. Cyrus Burley, of Monterey; Catahoula parish, B. B. Finley of Harrisonburg; Tensas parish, Mrs. Grace Manning of Waterproof; Lincoln parish, Mrs. Floy Van Hook, of Ruston; Morehouse parish, Mrs. George W. Hiatt, of Bastrop; Caldwell parish, E. L. Averett, of Columbia; Union parish, Grady Holloway, of Marion; Madison parish, Mrs. R. E. Gilbert, of Tallulah; Franklin parish, W. R. Griffing, of Gilbert; Richland parish, W. A. Cooper, of Rayville; Jackson parish, Mrs. Achsah Harrison, of Jonesboro.

The number of teachers, now on the relief rolls and unemployed at this time, who will be given work on this project and the parishes in which they reside, are given as follows: Ouachita parish, 48; East Carroll parish, 18; West Carroll parish, 20; Concordia parish, 21; Catahoula parish, 12; Tensas parish, 10; Lincoln parish, 40; Morehouse parish, 20; Caldwell parish, 17; Union parish, 40; Madison parish, 16; Franklin parish, 15; Richland parish, 25; Jackson parish, 17.

The Ouachita parish school board met Friday and arranged to provide the use of state textbooks for the adult schools, but aside from that the school board has no further connection with the WPA schools or their operation, Supt. T. O. Brown stated.

Similar schools were operated for a number of months in 1934 and in the spring and summer of 1935, but the work was discontinued about August 15, when governmental appropriations became exhausted.

A STAMPING CORNER

By W. J. KIRBY

After an absence of several weeks we shall again attempt to keep our readers informed on matters stampic. With a little assistance from Monroe collectors, we expect to again make this column a weekly feature.

The Twin City Stamp club, at its last meeting, again elected J. W. Cunningham as president. L. J. Hunnicut was elected vice-president, and Clarence Atkinson was reelected secretary. Other officers, who are appointive, will be announced at the next meeting, which will be held Wednesday evening, January 8. Every adult collector in Monroe is invited to attend. Visiting collectors are always welcome.

Announcement has been made that the Arkansas Centennial commission, in charge of that state's celebration next year of the 100th anniversary of statehood, has been advised by the postoffice department that a commemmorative stamp will be issued for the event, probably June 15. The Little Rock Philatelic society has suggested a reproduction of the Arkansas War Memorial building, the first state capitol, but suggestions are still being received by the commission.

It is said that the China Clipper stamp was designed by Alvin R. Meissner, who also designed the San Diego and the Michigan stamps. Then to Mr. Meissner goes credit for having designed three of the five stamps issued by the United States during 1935. The Michigan stamp, in our humble opinion, is one of the most beautiful stamps that we have ever seen, while the San Diego is among the worst. Let us hope that Meissner will continue the good work.

The Boulder Dam stamp continues to be considered a "puzzle picture." A recent news dispatch states that one collector avers that he has found, with the aid of a magnifying glass, a tiny picture of President Roosevelt tucked away amid the decorations of the stamp. Still another "expert" reports that he has found a mountain climber, the Liberty Bell, "September Morn," and the initials "U. S." Why not make Miss S. Morn a little more prominent, and perhaps the stamp might be as much sought after as the famous "Nude Duchess" of Spain.

BIG VOTE REGISTRATION SHOWN IN UNION PARISH

MARION, La., Jan. 4.—(Special)—According to a statement of Sheriff Pat Murphy, Union parish has a poll list of 5,081, this being the largest in the history of the parish. Registrar of Voters E. J. Albritton states that his records show approximately 6,100 registered voters in the parish, this being by far the largest on record. It is estimated that between 5,000 and 5,500 votes will be polled on January 21, the largest vote heretofore being about 3,300 to 3,400.

NEW SHIP PUT IN SERVICE BY DELTA

Third Plane For Use On Mail And Passenger Line Arrives Here

The third ship of the Delta Air corporation for service on the mail and passenger route between Dallas and Atlanta, arrived at Selman airport Friday noon, making the flight from the factory at Burbank, Calif., and thus completing the fleet.

According to C. E. Faulk, president of the Delta Air corporation, the new ship is the latest type of equipment available in air transportation. It is described as an all-metal 10 passenger de luxe Lockheed-Electra airliner with a cruising speed of 185 miles per hour, and a top speed of 206 miles per hour.

The ship is equipped with two Wright-Whirlwind motors capable of developing 450 horsepower each, and specially adapted and built for low sea level flying. Every precaution known to science to insure the safety of passengers has been incorporated in the construction of the ship.

The interior of the passenger compartments is large and commodious and equipped with the latest devices to give every comfort and convenience to those who ride the air. A feature of the cabin is the fact that passengers are subjected to a minimum of noise, thus making flying more pleasant and comfortable. The seats are adjustable, there are individual adjustable reading lights, individual air tubes, a wash room, plenty of storage space for hats and cloaks besides the regular luggage compartment.

The ship is in charge of a pilot and co-pilot, the latter attending to the comfort and needs of the passengers.

To guard against the possibility of forced landings due to inadequate gasoline supply, the Electras are equipped with additional fuel storage tanks, making it possible for the ship to fly a thousand miles and still have enough gasoline remaining as is prescribed by the department of commerce at the end of each flying period.

The acquisition of these three new Lockheed-Electra type ships is a forward step for the Delta Air corporation, Mr. Faulk declared, and now makes it possible for passengers to fly to any point east and west, north or south in the United States in eight to ten hours.

The three ships now in service are making two round trips daily from Dallas to Atlanta, officials of the company said. The eastern division of Delta route, which is a part of the mail contract owned by the Delta Air corporation running from Atlanta to Charleston, S. C., is being served by Stinson Model "A" eight-passenger ships, and the second ship to serve this division is expected to arrive from the factory at Wayne, Mich., some time next week.

Mr. Faulk expressed pride in the fact that the Delta Air corporation, a Monroe institution, is now possessed of the finest equipment available in the field of flying and declared that no expense has been spared to insure the finest type of air transport for passengers and mail.

"It is the boast of the Lockheed-Electra manufacturers, that Electras now circle the United States," Mr. Faulk declared.

With All My Love

ago Camerons controlled the banks here in this southern city, dominated the county politics, had all the best pews in the churches, made the most money and gambled it away more recklessly than any other family in the whole countryside."

"But this isn't 25 years ago. And I intend to live in the present," Dana said.

"Well said, noble and brave Scot. We'll see." Nancy smiled cynically. "Maybe you won't break under the iron hand of your grandmother, but I have an idea you'll be a bit bent in the process. Unless you run away, as your mother did."

Dana said, her voice trembling: "How can you talk so lightly of my mother—your mother, too?"

"Yes," the other girl answered slowly. "That's what I can't forget, what I can't forgive."

Dana said breathlessly, "What could you know of her problems?"

"It's easy for you, who had her love, to understand." Nancy's lips curved in a scornful smile. "Remember, Dana, I was the one who was left behind."

As Dana did not speak, the other went on lightly: "No hard feelings between us. After all, we're pretty much in the same boat. Both fatherless and motherless. Both penniless, because my father fell in with the family failings and lost all his money too. And your father, from what I have heard of him, never thought it important to make any. So we both start from scratch here!"

She lifted a slim hand in a mock salute, opened the door and closed it behind her.

Dana shivered. Tears streamed down her cheeks. She thought: "Nancy dislikes me. My grandmother really doesn't want me. I shouldn't have come."
